INDIANAPOLIS, IN, June 11, 2026—Newfields' newest exhibition, The Source, is now open to the public. On view through August 16, in the Bret Waller Gallery, the exhibition invites Members and guests to explore the histories, identities, and lived experiences of the African diaspora through the work of Indiana-based contemporary artists.

Guest curated by Indianapolis-based artist, Kyng Rhodes, The Source brings together works by fifteen local artists working across fashion, painting, sculpture and mixed media. Through a range of artistic approaches, the exhibition reflects the richness, creativity and cultural contributions of Black communities while exploring themes of resilience, struggle, joyful affirmation and cultural continuity.

The works create space for reflection and dialogue, encouraging visitors to look closely, engage deeply, and consider how inherited experiences continue to shape contemporary realities.

Members and guests are invited to attend tonight's Exhibition Opening from 6 to 8 PM. Guests will learn more about Rhodes' curatorial vision and hear from several of the artists featured in the exhibition. Complimentary light bites and refreshments will be provided.

Admission to the Opening and the exhibition is free for Members and guests.
