INDIANAPOLIS, August 28, 2026—Newfields is once again highlighting the creativity and talent of its employees in Artists Among Us: Season Five. Each year, this exhibition gives Newfields' staff the opportunity to showcase their own artistic practice and share their work with colleagues and visitors. Artists Among Us reflects Newfields' commitment to fostering creativity, not only in the IMA Galleries, but also among the talented people who make its exhibitions, programs and festivals possible.

This installation highlights more than forty staff-made works, offering guests a different perspective of the people who welcome visitors, produce exhibitions, cultivate Newfields' gardens and create exceptional experiences across the campus.

Beyond their professional roles, Newfields staff members are passionate creatives and makers, including textile artists, painters, ceramicists, sculptors and photographers. These personal creative efforts not only enrich their lives outside of work but also contribute to the creativity and culture of Newfields.

"Welcome to a celebration of the people behind Newfields and a powerful reminder that creativity extends far beyond our galleries," said Le Monte G. Booker, Sr., President & CEO, Newfields. "We are grateful to each participating artist for sharing their vision and enriching our community through their passion, skill, and imagination. Thank you for joining us in celebrating who we are as a team and the remarkable talent that thrives here."

Artists Among Us: Season Five will be on display on Floor 1 of the Indianapolis Museum of Art at Newfields until it closes in the summer of 2027. The exhibition is free and open to the public during museum hours.
