

Review faster, more efficiently, and more confidently with AI-powered review inside Microsoft Word

Agreement review can be one of the most painful and time-intensive parts of negotiation.

The number of agreements requiring review often increases as companies scale, but the manual processes those companies rely on may not always mature with them. They're tedious, time consuming, and rife with opportunities for error. That imbalance between capacity and demand can strain the few people with the authority and expertise to negotiate on behalf of the organization. Unchecked, it can become a bottleneck to getting agreements done quickly, resulting in everything from stunted revenue to increased tensions between teams—and more.

To keep up with the demands of a modern organization, agreement experts need to offload some of that work without sacrificing compliance or introducing unnecessary risk. With DocuSign AI-Assisted Review, you can.

Easily automate review against your playbooks with AI and get redline suggestions where terms deviate from your organization's requirements. Free up legal resources by empowering more of your business to conduct a first-pass review and negotiate without neglecting pre-approved standards. Give your organization the tools they need to get agreements done in a fraction of the time.

When the right people are focused on the right work, you can accelerate agreements, increase efficiency, and improve your organization's bottom line.
