By choosing to submit a story on the American Academy of Dermatology's (Academy) website, you acknowledge that the information you submitted is true and accurate. You also agree and authorize that any information you provide, including information about your medical condition and any photograph of you that you have submitted to the Academy, may be viewed by the general public. You further agree and authorize that the Academy may use your story and photo in any manner it deems necessary or appropriate on its website, print publications, or any other media. The Academy reserves the right to edit, shorten or format stories for any reason (without changing the substance of the story) and to remove or decline to post any story or photo. The Academy does not endorse or make any guarantees with regard to the accuracy, completeness or timeliness of any of the statements in your story. You understand the circulation of the materials could be worldwide and that you will not be entitled to royalties or any other compensation for publication of your story or use of your likeness. You also understand that this authorization may not protect or prevent further disclosures of your health information by the American Academy of Dermatology or its members, staff, volunteers, or other agents. You also waive any claim, cause of actions, damages, or loss (including attorney's fees) that you may have against the Academy or its officers, employees, agents, and affiliates relating to its use of your story or photograph to promote its fundraising or public awareness efforts. Although the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 ("HIPAA") privacy and security rules do not apply to the Academy, the Academy takes steps to protect the privacy of my information as set forth in the Academy's Privacy Policy.
