TIFF UNVEILS 2018 TELEFILM CANADA'S PITCH THIS! FINALISTS Showcasing new voices in Canadian filmmaking

TORONTO — One of the most anticipated and popular Industry events during TIFF, Telefilm Canada's PITCH THIS! is returning for its 20th edition. Six teams of talented emerging filmmakers will have six minutes each to pitch their feature-film idea to a live audience of industry experts and a jury of film professionals. The winning team will take home $15,000 to help bring their film one step closer to production, with support from a script consultant. The challenge will take place at the Glenn Gould Studio on September 9 and is open to all Press & Industry delegates.

"We are delighted to partner with Telefilm Canada once again on PITCH THIS!" said Kathleen Drumm, Industry Director at TIFF. "This lively competition was created to foster and support emerging feature filmmakers and continues to be one of the most popular programmes in the Conference schedule. Not only does it deliver an entertaining lineup of pitches, but it also provides real results: several projects of past participants have been successfully completed, such as Pat Mills' Don't Talk to Irene and Molly McGlynn's Mary Goes Round. We look forward to cheering on the 2018 contestants."

Designed to highlight homegrown talent, Telefilm Canada's PITCH THIS! provides an invaluable opportunity to bring up-and-coming filmmakers and industry experts together under the same roof.
