PIETRO MARCELLO'S MARTIN EDEN WINS 2019 TORONTO PLATFORM PRIZE

Kazik Radwanski's Anne at 13,000 ft and Alice Winocour's Proxima receive honourable mentions

TORONTO — Today the Toronto International Film Festival® announced the winner of the 2019 Toronto Platform Prize at a reception at the Bisha Hotel, hosted by Joana Vicente, TIFF's Executive Director and Co-Head. Pietro Marcello's Martin Eden was chosen as the winner of the $20,000 CAD prize by the jury, which is comprised of award-winning filmmaker Athina Rachel Tsangari, Berlinale Artistic Director Carlo Chatrjian, and international film critic Jessica Kiang.

"Our main prize goes to a thrilling and eloquent work of art that we agreed on unanimously and instantaneously," said the jury. "A politically and philosophically provocative story told with extraordinary cinematic invention and grace, this film reaffirms a faith that is easy to lose in 2019: that the cinema we know is an iceberg with nine-tenths still remaining to be discovered. This is a classic story told in a novel manner that dips below the surface to find highly unconventional, often archival modes of expression that are irreverent and anachronistic and yet that honour and participate in the history of cinema."

Additionally, the jury awarded two honourable mentions. One of the recipients is Kazik Radwanski's Anne at 13,000 ft, which the jury highlighted as "a film that creates a horror-movie level of buzzing tension out of a mercilessly close-up, yet deeply compassionate portrait of an unstable young woman, brought unforgettably to life in Deragh Campbell's riveting central performance."

The other honourable mention was awarded to Alice Winocour's Proxima, which the jury considered "a beautifully down-to-earth, procedural approach to a story about the lure of space vying with the bonds of home, that is for once told from the point of view of a woman who does not apologize for finding as much joy in her vocation as in her family."

TIFF presents a free screening of Toronto Platform Prize winner Martin Eden at TIFF Bell Lightbox on Sunday, September 15 at 12:15pm. Tickets to this free screening will be available online, by phone, and in person starting September 15 at 10am. This screening is Rush eligible.
