Frequently Asked Questions

- Available in the UK for IATA and Non-IATA travel agents recognised by TK as well as airport and handling staff
 - Competitive Standby Fares
 - Fully Flexible: No Change or Cancellation Penalties or Restrictions

What is a Standby ticket?

Standby ticket means that the passenger does not hold a confirmed seat reservation on the flight.

The passenger will arrive at the airport on the day of travel and if any seats are left available at the end of check-in, those available seats will be allocated to any standby passengers.

If I get on the first flight on my ticket will I be guaranteed a space for any onward connecting flight?

No, with a standby ticket you are on the standby list for each flight separately and can therefore only find out whether you are able to travel at the boarding gate on the day of the flight.

Therefore, flexibility with all your travel arrangements, including but not limited to accommodation, is necessary. You may be required to have an unexpected stopover at your connecting hub or a prolonged stay at your destination.

What happens if the flight is full and I am unable to travel?

We can offer to

- list you on the next available flight from the same departure point,
- change the date of departure according to your wishes,
- reroute you from another departure point (fare and tax differences may apply) or
- offer you a full refund (except for the DU service charge which is non-refundable).

Does the Travel Trade Discounted Ticket include a baggage allowance?

The travel trade discounted tickets feature an inclusive checked-in baggage allowance which varies according to destination and cabin class, but starts from min. 23kg.

The standard cabin baggage allowance also applies, details of which can be found at turkishairlines.com.

What are the benefits of the Travel Trade Discounted Fares?

The travel trade discounted fares offer extremely competitive rates which are consistent throughout the year with no seasonality.

Only the exchange rates and airport taxes are subject to change according to the time of booking, which may result in minor variations in total price.

The fares are fully flexible with the right to free unlimited changes and full refund (except for the DU service charge which is non-refundable).

These fares are ideal for the traveller who is comfortable with a flexible travel plan.
