

PULITZER

AT 615 W LAFAYETTE

For more than a century, this Albert Kahn-designed English Domestic Revival building has been a landmark in downtown Detroit. Originally known as the Detroit News Building, the structure has nods to its rich history with hand-crafted sculptures and artifacts from printing pioneers throughout every floor.

Just off the main lobby you'll find Pulitzer, a beautifully updated room.

Pulitzer is a 642-square-foot historic boardroom that can accommodate up to 24 people boardroom-style or up to 38 people theater-style.

The room is adjacent to the Scripps conference room, which is perfect for hosting a meeting or team-building exercise on one side and a meal on the other. With moveable furniture and several layout configurations, the room offers a wide range of uses to fit your needs.
