Australian Interstate Teams Matches

History

The Australian Interstate Teams Matches is Australia's premier amateur team golf championship and in 2020 changed to a mixed team format.

Each State is now represented by eight players, 4 women and 4 men, who contest singles match play in a round robin format, concluding with a Final for the leading two teams.

In respecting the history of the events, teams will also compete for separate women's and men's trophies.

Australian Women's Interstate History

The first annual Women's Intercolonial Match saw Victoria (players from Geelong and Royal Melbourne Golf Clubs) play Royal Sydney (members). It was played in Sydney in 1897 and was won by Victoria. Interstate matches continued from 1906 to 1939 and from 1947.

In 1933, following her death, the series became the Gladys Hay Memorial Cup in honour of Miss Hay (to perpetuate her great contribution to the game both as an administrator (Foundation Member of the ALGU and Council Member 1921-23) and player (Australian Champion 1922).

Each team consists of six players, with four players taking part in the two foursomes, and five players involved in the singles.

In 2011 the foursomes matches were removed which each team contesting singles matches only. At the conclusion of the five singles rounds, teams one and two play each other in a final to determine the winner.

From 2007, the Women's, Men's and Colts Interstate Teams Matches were played concurrently in the same city.

Australian Men's Interstate History

The first Australian Men's Interstate Teams Matches was played in 1904 between NSW and Victoria. Seven players contested one match each with NSW winning 5-2. The second championship was played between Victoria, South Australia and NSW, while the 1906 championship was played between Victoria, NSW and a combined Tasmania and Queensland team.

It was not until 1946 that all states contested the event. That year the Western Australian Golf Association presented the perpetual Interstate Shield. This shield was presented to the winning team until it was retired in 2002 due to lack of engraving space. The replacement Interstate Teams Trophy is still in use today.

Initially, the Interstate Teams Matches were played as part of a carnival of events alongside the Australian Open, the Australian Amateur and the Australian Foursomes Championships. As times changed the amateur events split from the open/professional events and eventually in 1994, the Teams Matches split from the Amateur Championship.

In 2004 the Interstate Teams Matches was played as part of a carnival of events that also included the Interstate Colts Teams Matches (for players aged 18-23 years) and the Australian Foursomes Championship.

From inception the format has been seven representatives from each state playing singles matches against all other states. In 1984 foursomes matches were added, but after 2011 the foursomes matches were removed. The format reversed to each team contesting singles matches only.

Since 2012, at the conclusion of the singles rounds, teams one and two play each other in a final to determine the winning team.

From 2007, the Women's, Men's and Colts Interstate Teams Matches were played concurrently in the same city.

Northern Territory was added to the competition in 2015.

The list of individual competitors in the Interstate Teams Matches over the years not surprisingly reads like a who's who of Australian golf and includes such names as:

Ivo Whitton (1912, 13, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 35, 37 and 1938), Doug Bachli (1946, 48, 50, 51, 52, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 62, 63 and 1964), Peter Thompson (1948), Greg Norman (1973,74), Wayne Grady (1977), Robert Allenby (1989, 90, 91), Stuart Appleby (1991, 92), Geoff Ogilvy (1995, 96, 97), Aaron Baddeley (1998, 99), Marc Leishman (2003, 04), Jason Day (2004, 05), Cameron Smith (2010,11,12,13)
