

MAB (Journal of Accountancy and Business Economics)

MAB (Journal of Accountancy and Business Economics) is a renowned scientific journal, which has been in existence since 1924. The editors aim to inform readers about theoretical and practical aspects of, and developments in accountancy. Furthermore, MAB publishes research articles on business economics and related knowledge areas, as far as relevant for accountants. In doing so, she focuses on scientifically trained accountants, controllers and business economists (and those who are studying here) and on everyone who has professional interest in the subjects dealt with.

The contributions made by authors may consist of spontaneous submissions or submissions at the invitation of the editorial board and include mainly (research) articles. In addition, columns, book reviews and comments from readers are included. The editors always keep the practical relevance for the (accountancy) practice in mind.

MAB is an open access peer-reviewed VABB-SHW (Flemish Academic Bibliography for the Social Sciences and Humanities) recognized journal with contributions in Dutch and English. MAB appears six times a year.
