

Your Checklist for Onboarding Clients to Bill.com

Clients adopting a virtual bill payment solution are fully aware it means significant changes to their current business operations, including new processes and learning a new system.

While intellectually they appreciate the overall intent of the transition, many struggle with getting there. Having a formal onboarding process for moving clients to Bill.com helps minimize the challenges that accompany this change.

Establish a consistent process to help your firm achieve expertise and efficiency in bringing all clients on board with Bill.com. Following the steps outlined here will help you get there quickly!

Checklist

Step 1: Preparation

Illustrate the benefits of Bill.com.

- Greater opportunity to make quicker and better decisions with real-time data and integrations with QuickBooks, Xero, NetSuite, and Sage Intacct.
- Less time spent processing payments.
- Ability to review and approve payments at any time, from any device.

Sell the value of team service.

- Implement separation of duties to prevent fraud and ensure proper checks and balances.
- Enhanced transparency and collaboration ensure nothing falls through the cracks.

Schedule a kickoff meeting.

- Understanding questions and concerns helps convey your interest in assisting the client's success.
- Educate the client. Make sure the client has the resources necessary to get through each step.
- Identify client employees that may need extra attention or hand-holding to get on board and fully trained.
- Identify early adopters that can encourage any colleagues having a harder time.

Step 2: Build processes to ensure success

Build a bill payment process.

- Map the current (paper-based) bill pay process to ensure any factors or nuances specific to the client's environment are recognized and considered in the following phases.
- Establish what role everyone fills and spell it out clearly for both the client and the firm.
- Educate the client on what to stop doing, such as not integrating systems or not using the appropriate approval workflow.
- Formalize the process in writing and having the client sign off on the agreed-upon workflow so that all can be held accountable for its execution.
- Train the client on how to use Bill.com. Show features that make the client's life easier such as the Bill.com mobile app and automatic, audit-ready tracking.
- Set a date to tweak, approve and begin using the process with the client.
- Set expectations.

Step 3: Follow up

- Show the client the results, including real-time information and reporting, to illustrate the value of Bill.com. Wrap this information into "big-picture" consulting that touches upon issues like cash flow.
- Remind the client to keep using the process. Don't be afraid to challenge the client to stick with the program even if there are some struggles.
- If the client isn't using the process, ask why. Then, you can work with the client to modify the workflow as necessary.
- Congratulate the client on using the process. Consider helping the client create a reward system for reaching milestones to further encourage adoption.
