In 1991, a document was locked in the safe of the director of the CIA. The document is still there today. Its cryptic text includes references to an ancient portal and an unknown location underground. The document also contains the phrase "It's buried out there somewhere."

All organizations in this novel exist, including the Freemasons, the Invisible College, the Office of Security, the SNSC, and the Institute of Noetic Sciences.

All ritual, science, artwork, and monuments in this novel are real.

on the list that had a small file size. "Good eyes. Yeah, that's really our only candidate so far. In fact, this file's so small it can't be more than a page or so."

"Open it," Katherine's tone was intense.

Trish could not imagine a one-page document containing all the strange search strings Katherine had provided. Nonetheless, when she clicked and opened the document, the key phrases were there... crystal clear and easy to spot in the text.

Katherine strode over, eyes riveted to the plasma wall. "This document is... reduced?"

Trish nodded. "Welcome to the world of digitized text."

Automatic reduction had become standard practice when offering digitized documents. Reduction was a process wherein a server allowed a user to search the entire text, but then revealed only a small portion of it—a cluster of sorts—only that text immediately flanking the requested keywords. By omitting the vast majority of the text, the server avoided copyright infringement, and also sent the user an intriguing message: I have the information you're searching for, but if you want the rest of it, you'll have to buy it from me.

"As you can see," Trish said, scrolling through the heavily abridged page, "the document contains all of your key phrases."

Katherine stood up at the reduction in silence.

Trish gave her a minute and then scrolled back to the top of the page. Each of Katherine's key phrases was underlined in capital letters and accompanied by a small sample of teaser text—the two words that appeared on either side of the requested phrase.

Trish could not imagine what this document was referring to. And what does it mean to be a "symbolist"?

Katherine stepped eagerly toward the screen. "Where did this document come from? Who wrote it?"

Trish was already working on it. "Give me a second. I'm trying to chase down the source."

"I need to know who wrote this," Katherine repeated, her voice intense. "I need to see the rest of it."

"I'm trying," Trish said, mortified by the edge in Katherine's tone.

Strangely, the file's location was not displaying as a traditional Web address but rather as a numeric Internet Protocol address. "I can't unpack the IP," Trish said. "The domain name's not coming up. Hold on." She pulled up her terminal window. "I'll run a traceroute."

Trish typed the sequence of commands to ping all the "hops" between her control room's machine and whatever machine was storing this document.

"Testing now," she said, executing the command.

Traceroutes were extremely fast, and a long list of network devices appeared almost instantly on the plasma wall. Trish scanned down... down... through the path of routers and switches that connected her machine to...

"What the hell?" Her trace had stopped before reaching the document's
