Famous for its bewildering diversity of both grape varieties and wine styles, Italy is the world's largest producer of wine, and is home to some of the oldest wine-producing regions. Italy has a rich and diverse wine heritage dating back more than two thousand years. Italy's vineyards are home to more than two thousand grape varieties, many of which are on the brink of extinction. The best-known Italian grapes are Sangiovese, Barbera, Nebbiolo, Montepulciano, and Pinot Grigio (although technically the latter is more French than Italian). These varieties cover many thousands of acres of vineyard, and can be found in various regions. At the other end of the scale are such little-known rarities as Centesimino and Dorona, which are found in tiny numbers in just one or two places. (www.wine-searcher.com)
