

ACT II

Swanilda and her friends find Dr. Coppelius' house to be populated by the most charming toys. Swanilda sees a girl sitting in a chair, reading a book and tries, unsuccessfully, to introduce herself and her friends to this mysterious girl. Then she realizes that the girl is actually a doll! The doll, Coppelia, dances for everyone, after which all of the dolls in the shop dance. Dr. Coppelius makes an untimely return home and chases the intruders away, except for the hapless Swanilda, who is trapped. She sits in the chair and pretends to be the Coppelia.

Dr. Coppelius is convinced by this ruse and gets down to the business at hand: casting a magic spell on his beloved Coppelia to turn her into a real girl. Swanilda plays along, but is finally caught in her deception when Dr. Coppelius finds the real Coppelia. Swanilda's friends come to the rescue, and convince the toymaker to forgive them.
