Subject overview

This subject develops students' skill in accurately locating the acupuncture points of the fourteen channels and principal non-channel points and introduces the theories of point prescriptions. Students will learn key terminology and theories associated with acupuncture points, including their nomenclature, and pinyin names. Students will develop familiarity with contemporary research into acupuncture points and point location. Students will be able to identify the categories, cautions, and contraindications for all points, and will also be able to describe the primary therapeutic actions and indications for major points to inform point prescriptions for the application of Chinese manual therapy techniques.

Assessments

- Week 6: Online Quiz
- Week 8: Written Assignment
- Week 13: Practical Assessment (on campus)
