UCI BMX RACING WORLD CUP

A BIT OF HISTORY

The UCI World Cup for BMX Racing first saw the light of day in 1996. The inaugural edition comprised four rounds: in Porlamar (Venezuela), Orlando (USA), Peterborough (Great Britain) and Valkenswaard (Netherlands).

In 2003, the UCI BMX World Cup was relaunched under the new name of UCI BMX Supercross World Cup. This new-look series saw the introduction of a Women's category in 2007, as BMX prepared to make its Olympic debut at Beijing 2008 (China).

Over time, the format of the event has changed.

Originally, riders were seeded for the main event during an individual Time Trial over two laps of the track, with the fastest riders qualifying for the next phase of competition. The format was further enhanced with the introduction of the Time Trial 'Super Final': the fastest 16 Men Elite and fastest 8 Women Elite riders over the two laps then completed a single individual lap of the track, with Time Trial medals being awarded to the top three.

In 2017, the Time Trial was dropped and racing began directly with Round 1. The new format means each round of a UCI World Cup can be staged in one day, enabling the UCI to organise two rounds on a single weekend.

Another major development in the UCI BMX Supercross World Cup came in 2021 with the introduction of Under 23 category racing for both men and women. From 1 January 2022, the discipline's season-long series underwent another name change, becoming the UCI BMX Racing World Cup. This change was in line with the decision to provide a clear distinction between the disciplines of BMX Racing and BMX Freestyle, both of which are on the Olympic programme and have their own UCI World Cup.

INTRODUCTION OF THE UCI BMX RACING WORLD CUP

UCI WORLD CUP FORMAT

The UCI BMX Racing World Cup format is different from the discipline's 'classic' format in that riders do not race three motos to gain qualification spots, rather this is shortened to a one run qualification, followed by a last chance qualifier (LCQ) run, where riders get a second chance to qualify.

All riders compete in Round 1, which comprises heats of up to eight riders who complete a single run. The first four finishers in each heat are automatically qualified into the finals. The remaining riders then compete in the LCQ, again divided into heats of up to eight riders. At this phase, the first two finishers qualify for the finals.

The next phase will then be a 1/16th or 1/8th final, depending on the number of entries. The riders who qualified from the LCQ are seeded behind those who qualified directly from Round 1. Again, heats of up to eight riders compete in a single run, with the first four riders qualifying to the next phase.

This continues, until there are eight riders remaining, who compete in a single 'main' final. The rider who crosses the finish line first wins the UCI BMX Racing World Cup round, second across the line is second, and so on.

RANKING POINTS SYSTEM

After each round, all riders are ranked in the order of their finishing position, with points allocated to the top 64 Elite riders and the top 32 riders for the Under 23 categories. The ranking points are accumulated over the season with the riders holding the most points after the last round being crowned the Racing World Cup Overall Winners.

The UCI recognises the top three ranked riders with a trophy for the season. The current standings for the riders can be located here: BMX Racing | UCI

The 2024 UCI BMX Racing World Cup concluded with an unprecedented Australian clean sweep, as athletes from Down Under topped the overall standings in all four categories. In Tulsa, Oklahoma, final wins confirmed the dominance of Saya Sakakibara (Women Elite), Izaak Kennedy (Men Elite), Teya Rufus (Women U23) and Oliver Moran (Men U23), marking a historic first for any nation.

Rufus launched her season with strong wins in Rotorua and Brisbane, showing consistency and focus. In Tulsa, her winning streak continued despite stiff competition and on-track incidents, showcasing her resilience.

The Men U23 category saw five different winners in five rounds before Moran sealed the title with a commanding win in Tulsa, capping off a consistent and smart campaign among an emerging group of young talents.

In Women Elite, Sakakibara delivered a masterclass, dominating early rounds before securing her title ahead of the American stop. Despite a crash in training, she bounced back to win both Tulsa rounds with characteristic strength and composure.

Kennedy's journey in Men Elite was marked by gritty performances, especially in Tulsa where he challenged top riders like Niek Kimmann (past Olympic Champion – Tokyo 2020 and 3-time UCI World Champion). With French favourites absent, Kennedy seized the opportunity, delivering a solid finish to clinch the overall title.

Australia's performance will be remembered as one of the most complete team campaigns in UCI BMX World Cup history. Their dominance across all four categories – Elite and U23, men and women – showcases not only individual excellence but the strength of the nation's overall programme. The medal table below further illustrates the scale and consistency of this remarkable success.
