

TREAT DAD TO A DAY OFF

Cut up these ideas into slips of paper Dad can choose to make his Sunday schedule, or create your own coupons to give Dad his best day ever.

I will draw a special picture for Dad to hang up by his bed or desk.

I will let Dad pick the car music (and not laugh at his choices).

I will take Dad to the park for a game of catch.

I will challenge Dad to a joke competition.

I will share my bowl of chips with Dad, even if they're my favorite kind.

I will not start a burping contest at dinner. Unless Dad wants to have a burping contest.

I will show Dad all my favorite YouTube videos.

I will not sit in Dad's favorite chair or leave my toys and books there.

I will go with Dad on a hike or bike ride and not complain that I'm tired.

I will show Dad all my best dance moves, and let him show me his.

I will pick up all the shoes and dirty clothing I have dropped on the floor throughout our home.

I will make Dad his favorite treat (maybe with help).

I will invite Dad to my tea party and only make him dress up if he wants to.

I will not jump on Dad when he's napping.

I will challenge Dad to a wrestling or tickle match, and not go easy on him.

I will watch Dad's favorite sportsball game on TV with him.

I will clean up after Dad and I do a messy science experiment.

I will invite Dad to play a board or video game with me, and let him go first.

I will help Dad with his chores or help him fix something.

I will give Dad the biggest snuggle of all time and tell him how much I love him.
