Book an appointment by phone at 513-6700 between 08:30–12:00 all weekdays. You can also send an e-mail to krabbameinsskimun@heilsugaeslan.is if you have received a letter from us.

By going for a breast cancer screening, it is possible to detect breast cancer at an early stage and thus significantly reduce the death rate due to the disease.

However, it is important to realise that screening is never 100% accurate in detecting breast cancer in its early stages.

You can find more information about screenings on the Samhæfingarstöð krabbameinsskimana website, and the website of the Directorate of Health has brochures on both cervical and breast screenings in several languages.

We encourage all women to participate in screening.
