The Future Game: The Road from Pro Athlete to CEO.

The financial crisis facing many professional athletes has received widespread coverage in recent months, with some publications stating that 60-80% of professional athletes declare bankruptcy at some point after their career has ended. While these publications shed light on a very real, growing concern among athletes, most of these pieces miss the complex realities of this problem. No one would argue against the need for fundamental 'financial literacy education.' The reality is that the financial lives of professional athletes more closely resemble a mid-sized corporation than a typical individual.

Drawing on the insights of industry thought leaders — as well as the athletes themselves — MGO examines the root causes of the financial crisis in pro sports, and offers a framework for success. The video series drops on November 15th, 2020, highlighted by a very candid conversation with NBA All Star Draymond Green as well as a panel discussion featuring Robert Roman & Louis Barajas of MGO Private Wealth.
