A Letter from the Executive Director

I couldn’t be prouder of Committee for Children. We’re celebrating our 40th anniversary this year, thanks to so many of you who’ve worked alongside us. We’ve turned a grassroots effort into a global nonprofit organization at the forefront of an unstoppable movement. Together we’re building a kinder world through social-emotional learning (SEL).

In 1979, a small but mighty founding staff of researchers, educators, and social workers collaborated with passionate volunteers to address the needs of children who had been sexually abused. Our first curriculum, Talking About Touching, ignited a national discussion about abuse prevention, and this focus on building prevention skills led to our groundbreaking SEL program, Second Step.

Second Step benefits more than 14 million children in 70 countries annually by providing them with the foundation for developing social-emotional and academic competencies. Students learn best when they feel safe and supported, and Second Step offers tools to create positive school cultures that bring out the best in students and educators.

Energized by the significant progress we’ve witnessed these past 40 years, we’ve set an admittedly audacious but achievable goal for the future: to profoundly deepen our impact and positively transform the social-emotional well-being of 100 million children annually by 2028. We invite you—fellow educators, advocates, and partners—to work with us to promote social-emotional learning as one of the most effective and economically sound approaches to raising kind, confident, and capable adults.

Want to get to know us better? See page 14 to meet some of the friendly faces in our organization, and visit cfchildren.org to learn about our work and be inspired to create a safer, better world for children everywhere.

Best regards,

Joan Cole Duffell
Executive Director,
Committee for Children
The kids love the photos of the kids’ faces. They ask constantly to play games with them! And I love hearing them use the language they have learned from the stories when they are solving problems during social situations.

Improved Behavior, Improved Learning

Research supports and highlights the impact of Second Step Social-Emotional Learning (SEL) as a tool for developing and improving executive-function and other social-emotional skills in preschoolers. Executive-function skills positively influence school readiness, academic achievement, and social relationships, and Second Step SEL can help make learning enjoyable with engaging songs, activities, and puppets. Preschoolers can get ahead and stay ahead—all while having fun.

Future Success for Young Learners

In their first years of school, children can become overwhelmed by so many new experiences. Evidence-based Second Step Social-Emotional Learning (SEL) helps teach kids skills to listen, focus, and follow directions. Colorful lesson cards, interactive songs, fun games, and entertaining puppets promote self-regulation and social-emotional skills, brightening children’s learning environment and guiding their future success.

Second Step provides students with the social-emotional skills and strategies to work through academic and social challenges, reducing the need for adult intervention and increasing the time on task.

Wes Moreland, Principal
Hector Cafferata Elementary, Cape Coral, FL
Breakthroughs in the Classroom and Beyond

Social-emotional competence becomes increasingly important as students are introduced to more independent situations—like group activities and after-school projects—that require putting social-emotional skills into practice. With evidence-based Second Step Social-Emotional Learning (SEL), fourth- and fifth-grade students develop important skills, such as how to deal with peer pressure and disagree respectfully. Students also enjoy our award-winning music videos and attention-grabbing visuals while mastering essential social-emotional competencies.

Create a Culture of Connectedness

The Second Step Middle School Program helps students navigate some of the most challenging years of their lives. Bringing together today’s technology and the latest research in adolescent brain development and social psychology, the web-based curriculum is flexible and responsive for teachers, and relevant for students. The result is a program that doesn’t just help middle schoolers do better in school—it helps them do better in life.

What’s Included

Teach
Taught weekly, the program’s lessons take about 25 minutes each and require little prep time. They address four key areas of SEL: Mindsets and Goals; Values and Friendships; Thoughts, Emotions, and Decisions; and Serious Peer Conflicts.

Extend
Educators can create a complete advisory program from nearly 200 activities, including scripted Class Meetings, Class Challenges, and Service-Learning Projects. Activities can be used with SEL lessons to reinforce skills or as standalone experiences.

Professional Development
Two learning opportunities—Program Training and Professional Learning—are designed to familiarize staff with Second Step Middle School concepts and help bolster educators’ SEL skills.

Principal Toolkit
Administrators can support the program’s success with tools and resources for communicating with staff and families, monitoring progress, and evaluating outcomes. Available with purchase of a schoolwide license.

Family Engagement
Educators can involve parents with weekly communications and a family letter that get the whole family engaged in learning. Also included: Academic resources, sample advisory program schedules, behavioral and academic framework alignments, tutorials, and more!

Social-Emotional Learning Lessons

UNIT 1

SecondStep.org/middle-school-program
What motivates you?

The kids. More than anything, I’m motivated by the idea that the materials we create help kids treat each other with respect and direct their energy in positive, meaningful ways. But in order for the lessons to reach students, teachers have to want to use the program. That’s why we test our program in real settings, to make sure educators understand the benefits and see how all the tools work together to support positive behavior and focused learning.

What words of wisdom do you have for education changemakers?

Do your part to raise awareness of the benefits and need for social-emotional learning (SEL). When schools and the general public vocalize this need, legislators pay attention. More than ever, federal and state governments are recognizing the need to provide safe, stable learning environments and teach children social-emotional skills that strengthen college and career readiness.

Before introducing any new program, involve those who will be using it, and let them take ownership of understanding its benefits and helping define a blueprint for change. The more familiar and comfortable practitioners are with new approaches and programs, the more likely it will be to secure funding for such programs and achieve breakthrough results for kids.

What have you learned from your team?

There is no finish line. We’re on a journey of continuous improvement that requires careful study of what works and what doesn’t and why. We’ve learned that it’s essential to work closely with everyone using our programs, so we understand their specific needs. If we can collaborate well and empower educators and students, then we’ll succeed together.

On a personal level, I’ve learned that to be successful, it’s important to ask the right questions and address potential issues proactively.

What do you think is unique about Committee for Children?

We’re a vision-driven bunch of professionals from education, research, and technical backgrounds. Individually we’re diverse in our interests and lifestyles, but as a group, we share a desire to make the world a better place and a belief that it’s possible, a sense of real belonging.

We’re innovative and adaptive without being reactionary. We evaluate the potential impact and value of each action we take, so we can offer schools the best options available in the realm of social-emotional learning. Every program we create is the manifestation of years of research, testing in the field, and ongoing customer feedback.

How do you “walk the talk”?

Dream big. Treat others with kindness and respect. Listen. Ask questions. Share what you learn. We practice the same social-emotional values we teach, whether we’re helping a teacher access online training, coaching an administrator through family engagement strategies, or facilitating a districtwide SEL implementation.

Just as we tell educators that quality relationships transform learning, we believe the same is true in business. That’s why real people who truly care about each outcome answer the phones, respond to emails, and follow up, every time.
Keeping Kids Safe from Abuse

With streaming lesson photos, videos, and songs, and supported by unlimited online staff training, these age-appropriate lessons effectively and expertly address topics such as not keeping secrets, safe and unsafe touch, and how to say no to unwanted touches. The research-based Second Step Child Protection Unit gives teachers the tools to recognize and respond to abuse and the confidence to comfortably teach students about this sensitive subject.

The Child Protection Unit Includes
- Unlimited online staff training
- Lessons, posters, and DVD for each grade
- Family materials (letters, videos, and activities)
- Lesson and family materials in Spanish

Staff Training

Module 1 Administators create or revise their child protection strategy, then create customized policies and procedures to help reduce risk of staff misconduct.

Module 2 Through realistic scenarios, all staff learn to recognize indicators of abuse and neglect; respond supportively to children who experience abuse, and report abuse.

Module 3 Teachers and counselors learn to teach the lessons, engage families using the materials provided, and overcome discomfort with talking to students about touching safety.

Each module takes 60–90 minutes.

Student Lessons

Easy-to-follow, scripted lessons teach children personal safety skills using clear, rules-based, age-appropriate instruction, giving kids the know-how and avenues to disclose abuse.

- Early Learning daily activities each take 5–7 minutes.
- K–3 weekly lessons each take 20–35 minutes.
- Grades 4–5 weekly lessons each take 35–40 minutes.

Family Materials

It’s important that families understand what’s being taught in schools, especially with sensitive subjects. We’ve created a set of educational materials to explain what students are learning, alleviate anxiety, and provide guidance for talking to kids about safe and unsafe touch.

Family Letters help explain the program and adults’ role in child protection.

Take-Home Activities and online videos further reinforce skills and encourage family discussions.

The Power to Create a Positive School Climate

A positive school climate requires robust bullying prevention. The research-based Second Step Bullying Prevention Unit gives educators and school staff the training and tools to effectively intervene and address school bullying while teaching students to recognize, report, and refuse bullying themselves. Prevention is power, and this program is designed to build a school culture that keeps students safe.

Staff Training

Module 1 Helps principals and program coordinators understand the adult/student relationship, refine and communicate their bullying policies and procedures, and communicate with families.

Module 2 Guides all school staff through scenarios that teach them how to recognize, respond to, and report bullying, and then make a plan for how to handle incidents.

Module 3 Provides teachers and counselors valuable instruction about teaching the lessons, following through, and involving families.

Each module takes 45–90 minutes.

The Bullying Prevention Unit Includes

- Unlimited online staff training
- Lessons, posters, and DVD for each grade
- Family materials (letters and activities)
- Additional online resources (teaching, implementation, and evaluation tools)
- Lesson and family materials in Spanish
- Online staff training
- Digital teaching materials
- Streaming lesson media, including photos and videos (also in Spanish through Grade 3)

Student Lessons

Through age-appropriate lessons that have been put to the test in real classrooms and award-winning, story-based videos, students learn to recognize, report, and refuse bullying.

- K–3 weekly lessons each take approximately 30 minutes.
- Grades 4–5 weekly lessons take 30–45 minutes.

Lesson Topics

| Class Rules |
| Recognizing Bullying |
| Reporting Bullying |
| Refusing Bullying |
| Role of Bystanders |

Family Materials

Engaging families in your bullying prevention effort will help make your program a success. Engaged families have more confidence and trust in you and your school—a critical factor when dealing with bullying situations.

Family Letters inform parents and caregivers that their children will be participating in the unit and provide access to more information and activities online.

Take-Home Activities give students a chance to practice skills and help families support the lessons at home.

“Relationships are so key in solving bullying issues. Kids have to trust that the adult cares, that’s why it’s so important that every single adult in a building has the strategy and the knowledge to be able to listen to a student and validate what they’re saying.”

Assessment

Panorama for Social-Emotional Learning

PreK–Grade 8
Panorama Education’s social-emotional learning measurement platform helps educators collect, analyze, and act on data about social-emotional learning, school climate, and more. Educators can analyze their data by subgroups such as race or ethnicity, gender, and Title I status and explore data at the individual, class, grade, school, and district levels.

Coming Soon

Second Step Beyond the School Day

We have some exciting news to share—Committee for Children is developing a social-emotional learning (SEL) program for after-school settings, summer camps, and other out-of-school time contexts. Right now, researchers and instructional designers at Committee for Children are collaborating with experts while field testing and piloting the new program with partner sites and schools across the country.

The program will be available during the 2019–2020 school year.

What Is It?

The new program, for kids in Kindergarten through Grade 5, will be packed with engaging resources and age-appropriate activities that support social-emotional development by focusing on self-regulation, social skills, and community building.

COMMITTEE FOR CHILDREN IS CELEBRATING
40 YEARS!

When we make a positive impact on enough kids through social-emotional learning, the effects can ripple out to help a family, a school, a community, and ultimately, the world. We call it the Empathy Effect, and it’s what Committee for Children has worked toward since 1979. This year, we’re celebrating our 40th anniversary by setting an ambitious goal: to positively transform the social-emotional well-being of 100 million children annually by 2028. But we can’t do it alone. Become an advocate. Add your voice. And let’s grow kinder together.

To learn more about the Empathy Effect, listen to our new SEL-centric podcast, or become an advocate for SEL, visit cfchildren.org/about-us/history
