FROM A PIECE OF WOOD TO THE HEART: HOW THE LEGENDARY HABA DUCK IS CREATED

An absolute classic at HABA and a must for any children's room: the pull-along duck.

It enchants children from one year of age and accompanies them on their first steps – they discover the world together!

But the magic begins even earlier: the duck is made with great attention to detail by HABA in Bad Rodach.

It takes a whole 38 steps for the experienced employees on site to produce the pull-along duck with passion and skill. A wide variety of departments at HABA work together like a well-oiled machine. It all starts with a piece of wood – from which the body parts are lovingly cut out individually by hand. The beech wood required for this comes from native forests in the usual HABA style. After the wood is cut out, the next step is sanding. Here, the parts are carefully sanded several times. In addition to rounding edges, sanding work also involves the small details that make the duck so special. For example, the cute notch in the tail is created here, to make the design as true to life as possible. By the way, this detailed work is just one example of the dedication of the specialists at every single step. This passion and attention to detail make the finished duck unique in the end.

Of course, the focus during production of the wooden duck is always on safety when playing. After all, the littlest ones like to put toys and so on in their mouths – no problem here thanks to the water-based paint used to polish the duck! Speaking of paint: the type used is also very special. The cute duck shines brightly when polished. In several work steps, the HABA expert team always ensures the highest quality and makes sure that the feathers are painted correctly: this is how the beak and wheels, for example, get their bright red. Then it's time for assembly. Everything comes together in a total of nine assembly steps. Hard-working specialists conjure up the duck we know and love from wings, beak, cap, head, and string.

Before the duck makes its way into the world, it undergoes various quality and safety tests. After all, it has to be a safe and durable companion for the littlest ones that they can enjoy for a long time to come. It is soaked, for example, in water – to mimic toddlers' saliva. This ensures that everything stays in place and no parts come loose. Various fall and stress tests are also carried out – because in everyday play, the duck is exposed to all sorts of mischief from children – and that’s a good thing. Our committed employees always go the extra mile: the test specifications are increased by 10 percent every time to guarantee optimum protection! This makes safe play possible!

Regardless of which stage of development they work in – all employees give it everything they’ve got and pursue one goal: to make each and every pull-along duck something very special so they not only bring children joy, but also become a loyal companion.

MY VERY FIRST GAMES – THE DUCK GAME

Oh dear: the cuddly toys are missing their favorite hats! Together, the fun duck Lu and children aged two and over go on a search in this first matching game: Who will discover the right hats and match them correctly? The observation game trains the recognition and matching of patterns and offers lots of language opportunities thanks to the bright colors and cute animals.

Two game variations ensure variety and long-term interest: In the first cooperative game, children win together if they match six hats before the star tiles are turned over. In the second game, players compete against each other to collect the three hats for their own playing cards. Has a player matched everything correctly? Then they are a lucky duck!

Another highlight: the pull-along duck can also be used for free play.

MY VERY FIRST GAMES – HILDA'S COLORS & SHAPES

Hilda the turtle is amazed: What a great sandcastle! She needs the children's help to explore the castle: together they find out which shapes were used to build the sandcastle. This involves rolling the dice, putting together shapes, and naming these and colors. In two cooperative game variations, children aged two and over can learn about colors while training their fine motor skills. The easy-to-grip, colorful wooden shapes are also great for free stacking and playing!

TAPSI, FLO & CO – RUN, JUMP – GET THE TOYS!

Run, jump – get the toys! In this lovingly designed HABA game, the exciting question is: Who can collect the most toys together with the baby animals? The puppies and kittens run around in the garden, jumping over each other. The children must help them. For every successful jump, there is a toy as a reward. Thanks to simple rules to start playing quickly, the wildly fun colored dice game ensures enjoyment for a long time to come with the lovingly designed wooden game material.
