Review faster, more efficiently, and more confidently with an AI-powered agreement assistant inside Microsoft Word

Agreement review can be one of the most painful and time-intensive parts of negotiation.

The number of agreements requiring review often increases as companies scale, but the manual processes those companies rely on may not always mature with them. They're tedious, time consuming, and rife with opportunities for error. That imbalance between capacity and demand can become a bottleneck to getting agreements done quickly, resulting in everything from stunted revenue to increased tensions between teams and more.

To keep up with the demands of a modern organisation, reviewers need tools to help them work quickly and effectively without sacrificing compliance or introducing unnecessary risk. With Docusign AI-Assisted Review, you can.

Easily automate review against your playbooks with AI and get redline suggestions where terms don't meet your requirements. Don't have a playbook? Iterate with conversational AI to answer questions, analyse terms, suggest surgical edits, or draft new language from scratch—or easily generate a new draft playbook based on your template to jumpstart your review.

No matter how you choose to review, AI-Assisted Review can help you get agreements done faster, more efficiently, and more confidently.

About Docusign

Docusign brings agreements to life. Nearly 1.8 million customers and more than a billion people in over 180 countries use Docusign solutions to accelerate the way they do business and to simplify people's lives. With intelligent agreement management, Docusign unlocks business-critical data that is trapped inside documents. Until now, this information has been disconnected from core business systems of record, costing organisations time, money and opportunity. Using the Docusign Intelligent Agreement Management platform, companies can create, commit and manage agreements with solutions from the number one company in e-signature and contract lifecycle management (CLM).
