INGREDIENT HIGHLIGHTS

PANAX GINSENG

One of the most commonly used and highly researched species of ginseng, Panax ginseng is used in supportive therapy for the promotion of healthy blood sugar. The most active components of this herb are ginsenosides, which have been shown to have antioxidant properties.

JOB'S TEARS

This tropical plant contains antioxidants, which can help protect against the cell damage known as oxidative stress that free radicals cause. Studies suggest that the fiber contained in Job's tears might help decrease how much fat and cholesterol the body absorbs.

LOTUS SEED

This plant provides dietary fiber, which can help slow the digestion of carbohydrates. It also contains a variety of vitamins, minerals and phytonutrients.
