FAQ

Q: What is hydrolyzed marine collagen?

A: Hydrolyzed marine collagen is derived from fish that has been broken down into smaller, more easily absorbed peptides through a process called hydrolysis. This process involves using water and enzymes to break the collagen molecules into smaller pieces, making it easier for your body to digest.

Q: Why is marine (fish) collagen used for this product?

A: Marine collagen is a clean, sustainable alternative to bovine, chicken, or porcine sources. We source ours from Friend of the Sea–certified fisheries and aquaculture (fish farming), ensuring responsible use of marine resources and supporting ocean health. With aquaculture now supplying over 50% of fish for human consumption, responsible sourcing helps protect wild stocks, preserve marine habitats, and reduce environmental impact.

Our collagen is carefully extracted from nutrient-rich parts of the fish for purity, potency, and effectiveness—delivering a premium supplement that’s good for you and good for the planet.
