

Selling on eBay?

You'll need GS1 numbers

If you want to list a product on eBay, for most categories, you'll be asked to add a product identifier – GTIN, UPC or EAN

GTIN, UPC and EAN are all terms for GS1 barcode numbers. GTIN (Global Trade Item Number) is their correct name. The number you find beneath the barcode on every product.

What you need to do

Join now to start assigning your GS1 numbers and barcodes!

Once you've joined, you'll be able to log into our MyGS1 member portal, which has tools and services to help you manage your account and grow your business.

Did you know?

These numbers help you to uniquely identify your product: something that eBay needs you to do so they can improve the quality of their product catalogue.

By doing this correctly you can help to maintain the high-quality shopping experience buyers have come to expect from the eBay marketplace.

To start assigning barcode numbers to your products, you'll need to follow these three easy steps;

- 1 Join GS1 Australia online, www.gs1au.org/our-services/numbering-and-barcodes/preform
- 2 Receive your own unique GS1 numbers
- 3 Start barcoding your products
