We expect all bathrooms to have toilet paper and soap. Why are period products treated differently? 90% of female teens in Colorado report having their period unexpectedly without the proper products at school.

"It's only logical that we should also ensure students have easy access to period products to support their uninterrupted education and well-being," said Representative Brianna Titone.

No student should face barriers to education because of their period. That's why we are supporting HB24-1164.

"As Chair of the Senate Education Committee, my focus is on fostering a supportive and equitable environment for Colorado students. This legislation is a crucial step in this direction. It's about ensuring that every student can access the resources they need to succeed, creating a more inclusive and nurturing environment for our community," said bill sponsor Senator Buckner.

3 Don't Forget Your Toilet Paper

Caption:

Imagine a world where you had to bring your own toilet paper to school.

But that's exactly what happens for students with periods. They must bring their own period products to school even though it's a natural biological function.

It's time to break the stigma and shame. It's time to secure free access to period products in our schools.

Can you imagine unexpectedly starting your period in school without the necessary products? Meanwhile, toilet paper can be found in every single stall. Both are essential products for normal biological functions.

Why should periods be treated differently?

No student should face the stress of starting their period at school without the essentials. It's time to ensure period products are just as accessible as toilet paper for Colorado students.
