

CYBERSECURITY PREDICTIONS FOR 2022 & BEYOND

What security and technology trends are expected to emerge or expand in 2022 and how can you prepare?

SPACE TRAVEL

#1

Taking advantage of the huge wave of space tourism, expect phishing attacks and faux websites to crop up across social media and the Internet around this topic.

TALENT RESOURCES

The year 2022 will prove to be the most challenging yet in finding cybersecurity talent, and the imbalance between demand and supply will cause salary spikes across all level of IT security professionals.

#3

Businesses can expect that newer devices will be cellular-enabled, or cellular capable, to provide services outside of local area and Wi-Fi networks.

RANSOMWARE REINVENTED

New paradigms to extort money will emerge in 2022 and organizations should expect ransomware to become personalized and increasingly involve different types of assets, like IoT.

SUPPLY CHAIN KINKS

#5

Supply chain attacks will mature in 2022, while expanding in scope and sophistication, meaning that more third-party solutions and common development practices are likely to be targeted.

CYBER INSURANCE TERMINATION

Expect a tsunami of cyber insurance cancellations and a mad scramble to obtain new coverage, potentially at much higher rates; proper cybersecurity hygiene will be demanded by cyber insurance underwriters.

FREEDOM OF SOCIAL NETWORKS

#7

Expect to see tighter controls on the content that is distributed via social platforms, reliable attestation for the source of the material, and potentially access to the data for authorities.

SOFTLY, SOFTLY

Next year will see the average time from intrusion to detection grow, giving attackers more time to perform reconnaissance and wreak havoc on systems by establishing long-term residence within networks.

BROKEN RECORD

#9

The number of successful attacks will continue to grow, the average cost to the victim organization per successful attack will rise, and the pattern will repeat.
