Installing your Cortex software

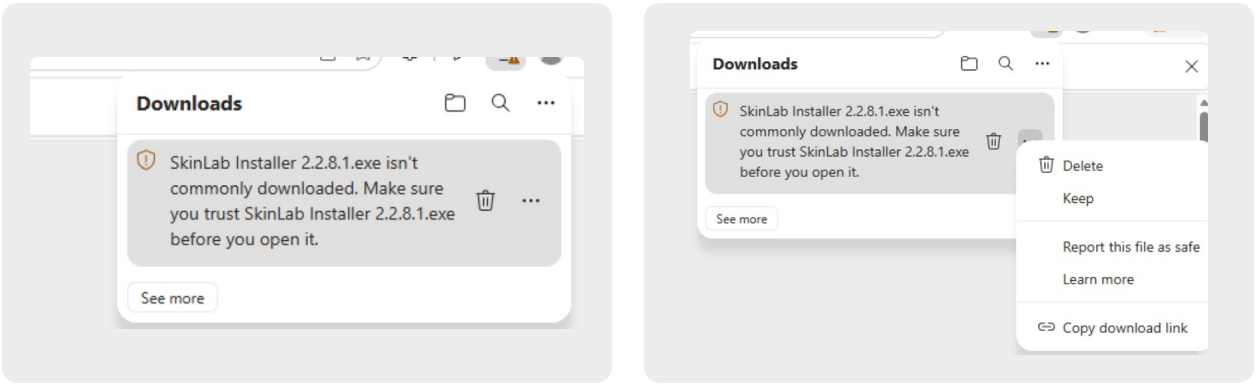

When you download new software from cortex.dk, Windows may show a security warning. This is normal for newly released files and does not mean anything is wrong. Windows simply has not yet seen the file downloaded many times. Follow the two steps below to complete the installation.

1 Keep the file when downloading

Your browser may say the installer is not commonly downloaded. In Microsoft Edge:

Open the Downloads panel and click the three dots next to the bin icon.
Select Keep. The file will now download.

Other browsers look slightly different but offer a similar option, such as Keep or Download anyway.

2 Allow the installer to run

When you open the installer, Windows may show a blue window saying Windows protected your PC.

Click More info.
Click Run anyway, which now appears at the bottom.
Follow the installation steps as usual.

Always download Cortex software directly from cortex.dk.
