

Wolt Tech Talks is an inclusive community of current and future tech enthusiasts. We want to create and promote a diverse, safe event environment for all of our community members and participants.

We believe in building communities, where everyone can share knowledge and learn from each other, but meaningful discussions can happen only if we all feel safe and respected. As such, we expect all attendees, speakers, organizers, and talents taking part in our events to comply with our Code of Conduct.

We have zero tolerance for violence, harassment, or mistreatment of any kind. By harassment and other exclusionary behavior, we mean, but not limit to, using aggressive language against another person or threatening others with violence; discriminatory jokes and language; personal insults, especially those using racist or sexist terms or unwanted sexual attention; repeated harassment or intentional intimidation of others; sharing sexually suggestive, explicit, or violent content as well as revealing (or threatening to post) other people's personally identifying information (also known as "doxing"). We do not tolerate persistent disruption of conversations/talks/presentations and advocating for, or encouraging, any of the previous behaviors.

In case you witness or experience any disrespectful behavior or something that is making you feel uncomfortable at one of our events, please bring the issue to our staff immediately (applicable both for in-person and virtual cases). We'll reserve the right to address the matter accordingly, which may include, but is not limited to, warning the individual(s), eviction from the event, or banishing from attending future events.

This Code of Conduct may be changed or updated at any time by Wolt.
