	2. Insurance agreements	192
	3. Statements	192
	4. Experts	193
	5. Privileges	194
	6. Trial preparation materials	195
§6.3.	Discovery strategy	196
	1. What facts do I need to establish a winning case on my claims (or to defeat the opponent’s claims)?	196
	2. What facts have I already obtained through informal fact investigation?	196
	3. What “missing” facts do I still need to obtain through formal discovery?	196
	4. What discovery methods are most effective for obtaining the “missing” facts?	197
	5. What facts and witnesses that I already know of through informal investigation do I need to “pin down” by using formal discovery?	198
	6. What restrictions does my litigation budget place on my discovery plan?	199
	7. In what order should I execute my discovery plan?	201
	8. How can I conduct discovery informally?	203
	9. How can I limit discovery against my party?	204
§6.4.	Discovery planning meeting and pretrial scheduling conference	205
	1. Law	206

	3. Document subpoenas to nonparties	256
§6.8.	Electronically stored information	257
	1. Law	257
	2. Practice	261
	a. Initiate a “litigation hold” with your party and the opposing parties and learn about your party’s ESI and key IT personnel	261
	b. “Meet and confer” under Rule 26(f) with opposing counsel about ESI discovery issues, including whether to enter into a “clawback” agreement to govern privileged and trial-preparation material	266
	c. Attend the Rule 16 conference to discuss the parties’ discovery plan with the court, and argue for your approach in disputed areas	268
	d. Make sure your initial disclosures under Rule 26(a) include required ESI disclosures	268
	e. Consider using ESI to answer Rule 33 interrogatories	268
	f. As the requesting party for your Rule 34 requests to produce and Rule 45 subpoenas, determine the form or forms in which you want the requested ESI to be produced. Consider early interrogatories and depositions of opposing parties’ IT personnel to learn details of their ESI systems	269
	g. Determine as the producing party if you will object to a request or subpoena for ESI on the grounds that (a) the requested ESI is “not reasonably accessible,” or (b) the requested form of production is improper. If (b), suggest another form	271
	h. If the court rules that the requested ESI is not reasonably accessible, be prepared as the requesting party to show that good cause exists to require that the ESI still be produced	272
	i. If the court orders discovery of ESI that is not reasonably accessible, be prepared as the producing party to show that the request’s undue burden or cost warrants cost-shifting	273
	j. If the responding party has altered or destroyed ESI after the time that party knew or should have known of its obligation to preserve ESI, determine as the requesting party if Rule 37 sanctions for spoliation are appropriate	274

	k. As the responding party, if no prior agreement exists, screen your ESI for privileged and confidential information	275
	l. The producing and requesting parties must work out the mechanics for producing the discoverable ESI. Consider using TAR.	276
§6.9.	Depositions	277
