The Why Behind Our Work

The traditional innovation model that has successfully transformed other industries like retail and media has proven largely inadequate. Despite rapid advancements in the science of healthcare over the past 20 years, the business of care delivery remains mostly unchanged — with patients suffering every day as a result. We built Redesign to solve these pain points of healthcare innovation at scale.

Creating Companies

We've streamlined the complex work of ideating, developing, funding, and launching companies. It's a dynamic process that starts by bringing together a carefully designed team of experts across technology, healthcare and finance to pressure-test ideas and build the foundations for launch. This results in an iterative approach to company building that allows us to constantly apply learnings across the ecosystem of Redesign Health companies.

Companies Built at Redesign Health

More than 40 companies have been created at Redesign Health, spanning cancer care, teleaudiology, COVID-19 testing, metabolic health and more. They range from newly founded businesses to seed stage to Series B+ companies that have raised significant rounds from blue-chip investors. To date, all Redesign Health companies have been successful in scaling business models and raising subsequent rounds. Lively, the first company founded at Redesign, was recently acquired by GN Hearing. Learn more about Redesign Health Operating Companies here.

Areas of Focus

Our thesis for change in healthcare is intentionally broad. Over the last decade, we've seen large healthcare institutions and technology companies set out to drive innovation. While there has been some success, the industry at large has not kept up with the needs of patients and providers, or the incredible trajectory of science and research. We believe that change will come by innovating across all of the pain points in healthcare — whether that's access to care, insurance, transparency in billing, etc.
