A message from the Chairman & CEO

Every day at Guardian, we bring to life our purpose to inspire well-being®. We provide financial protection and confidence for you and your loved ones, support your wellness journey, and work with you to invest and build your wealth to help provide certainty in an uncertain world. It's a great privilege and opportunity to be there for all of you.

We are making significant progress in advancing our strategic initiatives to enable us to champion your well-being. In The 2024 Guardian Annual, I'm excited to share how we are delivering against our goals and positioning the company to create additional value in 2025 and beyond.

Financial strength and stability

Guardian remains one of the strongest and most highly rated insurance companies in the US with an Aa1 (High Quality) rating by Moody's, an A++ (Superior) rating by A.M. Best Company, and an AA+ (Very Strong) rating from Standard & Poor's.¹ Our sound underwriting, responsible capital management, and robust investment returns give you the assurance we'll fulfill our commitments for generations to come.

In 2024, we achieved $2.4 billion in operating income and approved a record $1.6 billion dividend payment for 2025 to our participating whole life policyholders.² We also unlocked value by managing capital efficiently, including the expansion of our partnership with HPS Investment Partners (HPS). Our combined investment experience and access to market-leading investment strategies create additional value in our portfolio for our policyholders and help drive long-term growth.

We are champions of well-being for our customers, colleagues, and communities

As a mutual company, our focus is on you — not shareholders. The Guardian Annual highlights how we champion well-being for your mind, body, and wallet®. You'll meet our colleagues, partners, and financial professionals, including Ashvin Chheda who was motivated to become a financial advisor following his father's diagnosis with an aggressive cancer. Chheda collaborates with his clients to achieve financial independence so they can help reduce unnecessary stress and focus on what matters most in their lives.

Our mutuality fosters trust, loyalty, and shared value, guiding every decision we make. Our long-term relationships with our customers make us uniquely positioned to support their well-being and encourage healthy behaviors to help them live healthier, happier lives.

We've transformed the wellness journey and continue to innovate to support life's pivotal moments. In 2024, Guardian was one of the first carriers to build caregiver and cancer support within our long-term disability insurance and include tobacco cessation services in our dental insurance.

Pursuing excellence

I want to thank our colleagues, partners, and financial professionals for continuing to pursue excellence. Their dedication has earned Guardian recognition as one of America's Best Large Employers by Forbes for the fourth year in a row³ and outstanding customer service acknowledgements from J.D. Power⁴ and DALBAR.⁵

To our customers, your trust in Guardian continues to inspire us to provide lasting value and protection for you and your loved ones. Thank you for being a part of this journey with us.

Sincerely,

Andrew J. McMahon

Guardian is here for all of you. The part of you aiming to get in more steps. The part of you striving to push your paycheck further. The part of you that takes time to contemplate, stretch, and breathe. And we're not only here for all who need us, we're here for all who need you. The parents you support, the children you care for, and the friends who became family.

When you need a helping hand, you can count on Guardian to deliver on the promise we made to you. To all of you.

We're proud to share stories that shine a light on our customers, colleagues, and communities. They are the truest demonstrations of how Guardian inspires well-being.

Inspiring well-being

Supporting professional golfer Rob Labritz during a difficult time

In 2012, PGA Championship golfer Rob Labritz's wife Kerry woke up one morning, looked across the bed at her husband, and said, "Rob, you look really skinny." Despite eating enormous meals, he discovered that he weighed 50 pounds less than he did the previous month.

Rob went to the doctor, and in the days he waited to receive his blood work results, became convinced that he was dying. "I thought, well, okay, you got to play in three majors, and you've got Guardian life insurance so your family's going to be taken care of. I guess it's been a pretty good life."ⁱ

Rob and his financial professional set up a foundation of financial protection

Over a decade previously, Rob met Guardian Financial Professional Nicholas Liapunovⁱⁱ and they embarked on a relationship to set up a foundation of financial protection for Rob and his family, arming him with life and disability insurance, as well as a will.⁶ The business relationship turned into a long-lasting friendship.

"It was a scary time, waiting for those test results," says Nick. "But we talked about how no matter what happens, he felt at ease financially because of the planning we did. That planning stands the test of time. Although things change in everybody's lives, that foundation of financial protection stays with you forever."

"If I was in this situation without ever having met Nick," says Rob, "I would have been so worried."

Rob's life insurance positively impacted his mental health in a time of stress

Rob received a diagnosis of Graves' disease, an autoimmune disorder that leads to an overactive thyroid. Thankfully, it was not as dire as he expected. He had surgery to remove his thyroid and is looking forward to a healthy future.

Rob says this experience made him a big believer in the impact of life insurance on one's mental wellness during difficult times. "My family's the most important thing to me. Guardian made me feel confident that they would be protected. Ten years later, here I am, a healthy guy with another child. You can't beat that."

Long-term customers like PATH put their trust in Guardian, allowing us to grow together

When Laria Breland was growing up, she experienced housing insecurity. "I'm the youngest of seven," she says. "My mom has a huge heart, and she did the best she could, but there were a lot of us. It was an uphill battle."

Laria was searching for work with meaning, and wanted to help families like hers, so she began working at PATH, a nonprofit homeless services provider.

"I think it's a fundamental right to have a place where you can lock the door and feel safe and secure," says Jennifer Hark Dietz, CEO of PATH. "A lot of our employees have lived experience of homelessness. Like Laria, they're able to deeply relate to the people they're working with."

PATH works to provide the same kind of holistic approach to well-being for their own 1,000 employees as they do for the people they serve. Guardian provides benefits that care not only for their physical health, but also their financial and emotional health.

As PATH has grown, so has their Guardian benefit offerings

PATH and Guardian have worked together for over a decade. "Our relationship with Guardian has grown as our employee needs have evolved," says Jennifer. "Our benefits provide our employees with the opportunity to feel like they have contingencies in place so their financial wellness can be taken care of."

With a full-time role, Laria now has access to benefits she never had as a kid including dental, vision, disability, accident, critical illness, hospital indemnity, and life insurance benefits. Her self-care includes going to therapy, utilizing her EAP, painting, and decorating and organizing her home.

"Guardian has really helped to embed a wellness perspective and to prioritize self-care into our culture as an organization," says Jennifer.

PATH employees like Laria are taking care of the well-being of other people. Guardian helps take care of the well-being of Laria.

Maternity benefits to help you build and care for your family

During my pregnancy, my nausea and anxiety were unbearable. Thankfully, through my benefits with Guardian, I could get mental health resources to help me feel grounded. And once my daughter was born, managing my short-term disability benefits was simple. Throughout all of my interactions with Guardian, during and after my pregnancy, I was always treated with care and empathy.

Sometimes unexpected emergencies come up, and you have to miss work to take care of loved ones. When I absolutely needed time off with no financial worries, Guardian sure came to the rescue. They gave me a sense of stability and one less thing to worry about.

Supporting you through life's pivotal moments

Guardian introduces a range of wellness resources to help care for you and those you love

We're on a mission to take care of all of you. So, we embarked on a mission to support the well-being of our Group Benefits customers and their families with a suite of wellness partnerships to offer personalized benefits at any stage of life.

Easing the confusion of caregiving with logistical support

No matter how much we love those we care for, caregiving can be complicated — and a logistical equation that seems impossible to crack. So, Guardian partnered with Wellthy to offer personalized caregiving support to our members and our colleagues. Wellthy helps create a plan and takes action to support needs like managing a health diagnosis, moving a loved one into a living facility, finding a reliable child care service, and coordinating daily tasks like paying bills and filling prescriptions.⁷

"Their guidance not only drastically changed the outcome for my father, but it allowed me to make informed decisions that were in my family's interest."

Pelago

Quitting tobacco and nicotine doesn't have to be done alone

Nearly a third of working Americans use tobacco products, even though many want to quit.⁹ That's why Guardian has partnered with Pelago, a digital substance use management platform, to offer personalized resources included in Guardian dental plans. This offering is available to Guardian dental members and their family (ages 15+). Pelago provides access to a qualified quit coach, a clinical assessment, and digital tracking tools to help members quit smoking, vaping, and using other tobacco/nicotine products — for good.¹⁰

We're with you on your cancer journey

Rather than feeling alone when facing a cancer diagnosis, we want to help our members feel informed and supported on this journey. We partnered with Osara Health to include cancer support services as part of Group Long Term Disability, offering access to a unique six-to-12-week program to help members focus on their holistic well-being throughout their treatment.⁸

"Guardian's level of care made all the difference during a really difficult time. The Osara program gave me hope, showing me there's light at the end of the tunnel."

Spring Health

Eliminating barriers to well-being with access to mental health resources

Family is everything. But each family's mental health needs are unique, and the struggles of one may impact all. That's why Guardian's mental wellness benefits through Spring Health expanded even further in 2024 to offer participating employees and their family members quick access to counseling and other specialized health resources when they need it most.¹¹

Preserving Peter's lifestyle and protecting his income with disability insurance

Peter, a cardiovascular surgeon, worked with his financial professional for 15 years, planning for his future and putting safety bumpers in place, just in case. After years of leaning over his patients to perform surgery, he developed chronic pain in his back, requiring a surgery of his own — a fusion of his vertebrae. No longer able to practice, he called in his disability claim. After a career of taking care of his surgical patients, it was Guardian's turn to care for Peter.ⁱ

I never expected to have to use my disability insurance. But then again, no one ever does. The disability insurance policies that I have with Guardian have helped me to survive the hardest years in my career and prevented my family from losing everything. I wouldn't still be standing without the help of my financial professional, who made sure I had some of the best coverage possible.

Peter
Guardian disability insurance customer

My working relationships start with physicians when they're in training. Then, as their careers evolve, I make sure that their protection grows with them. Peter's story is exactly why I do the work that I do. When someone's ability to earn an income suffers, my clients know that the work we've done together will afford them not only financial backup, but a choice on how they move forward with their lives.

Guardian says “yes” to those who need us

After being turned away from three other major carriers due to his pre-existing condition, Chris found a home with Guardian

When Chris went in search of life insurance coverage, he said, “I thought I should be honest with myself, so I Googled ‘insurance that allows HIV patients.’” Chris, who is currently living with nondetectable HIV, was able to secure coverage from Guardian.¹²

He is preparing now, while he’s young and healthy, to have his funeral affairs covered so that he doesn’t leave debt behind for his sister. “At a funeral, someone has to pay for the makeup, the tuxedo, and the headstone,” Chris says. “Having a final expenses policy in place makes me happy that my family will not have to pay out of pocket.”

Chris thanks Guardian on behalf of people like himself who have pre-existing conditions. “People are often forced to crowdsource to fund their own funerals. They have to put the burden on those they love. It doesn’t mean they didn’t try. But when people get denied life insurance coverage over and over, they give up. Guardian gives us opportunity.”

We give our best to our customers

Guardian has been recognized by J.D. Power for providing "An Outstanding Customer Service Experience" for Phone support — seven years in a row.

DALBAR recognized Life, Disability, Annuity, and PAS Contact Center teams for superior customer service.

At Guardian, culture means that everyone in our workplace feels a sense of belonging, like they're exactly where they should be, because we honor their perspectives and points of view. We are a company that will always honor our values, and that means that we live our culture of doing what's right — both personally and professionally. Each colleague adds a distinct contribution, and each team's accomplishment benefits all of us.

A Guardian employee makes a confident comeback after a life-changing accident

Mahenthiran Kulandhaivelu had been working as an Operations Associate in Group Benefits Billing at Guardian India¹³ when he was involved in a critical, disabling accident. It resulted in the loss of his legs.

His life turned upside down. He moved home with his family, went on disability, and struggled with depression — but he was also incredibly resilient. It took over a year, but he learned how to walk again.

Mahenthiran's colleagues at Guardian India knew that he would need time to recover. His manager, Manish Nagrani, told him, "Don't worry about your job. Guardian will be here when you're ready. Focus on getting better."

"I could take that time to heal," says Mahenthiran, "because my job was secure. I didn't have to worry about my finances, and that was at least one thing that my family and I didn't have to struggle with."

Support from his colleagues gave Mahenthiran the confidence to return to work as a top performer

Phone calls and letters from his colleagues gave Mahenthiran confidence. He knew he had a support network to return to. Since his return to the office, Guardian India has been flexible with his work arrangements whenever he needs it.

"You would think that after a life-changing incident like this, you would see a drop in the quality of work," says Manish. "But that never happened with Mahenthiran. In fact, it was the opposite. He is a top performer who is always looking for opportunities to help other teams."

After his accident, Mahenthiran feels that his confidence has continued to increase. "I am not doing less," he says. "I am doing more. I learned that when life gets hard, Guardian will never leave you behind. I feel like I can do anything."

A financial professional finds a personal connection to inspire his work

Financial wellness can grant you better balance

Ashvin Chheda was an engineer and a prolific inventor living in Dallas when his dad became ill with an aggressive cancer. At the time, he had a completely hands-off approach to his personal finances. But he quickly had to learn about his father's savings and investments. "It really opened my eyes, and I pivoted," he says. "I needed to learn how to build my own financial wellness, so I started that journey as a client. I began working with a Guardian financial professional."

As an eager student, Ashvin was soon peppering his financial professional with questions and ideas. "He told me I asked a lot of good questions ... but too many of them," Ashvin laughs. "He told me I should think about doing his job myself." So, Ashvin became licensed. He started working with his family and friends on nights and weekends. He was energized by imparting holistic advice.

"People tend to complicate financial planning," says Ashvin. "When you boil it down, it's really very simple. We're all working to pay our bills and save money. It takes some discipline to save and invest, but we're on a journey toward retirement. Things can derail your journey, so you have to make sure to protect your capital. These aren't difficult decisions. I try to keep things as straightforward as possible."

I have clients from preschool teachers to CEOs, and my philosophy around finances is always the same: Financial wellness creates balance. If you save well, invest wisely, and make decisions that protect your family, it reduces a lot of stress. It puts you on a journey to financial independence. It can give you your purpose. It allows you to enjoy today and tomorrow. You're on your way to overall well-being. It means you can live a happy life.

Maria Velat becomes an advocate for para athletes

After a high school cross country race, Maria Velat experienced a randomly caused inflammation of the spinal cord called transverse myelitis. While some people recover fully, Maria was left paralyzed.

Maria's role as an advocate for para athletes began shortly after her injury. She led the charge to create a proposal to petition the state of Michigan's athletic association to allow para athletes to compete and score points at the regional level for high school teams. After four years of advocacy, the adaptive category within high school track and field was established. Maria is still hard at work advocating for full inclusion of adaptive athletes, including the ability to compete and score points at state finals.

Maria says that people need to know that it's possible to still be an athlete when you're disabled. For her, it's not only about being able to participate — it's about competition and the drive to win.

This drive has led her to excel at her sport. Maria competed in the first ever wheelchair track collegiate championships at the Drake Relays, recognized by the NCAA. Guardian helped fund her participation.

Guardian and ASAP work to create equity for all athletes

As one of the leading providers of disability insurance, Guardian is proud to partner with the University of Michigan to create the Adaptive Student Athlete Program (ASAP). This national program helps significantly expand access to competitive opportunities in para track and field, wheelchair tennis, and wheelchair basketball for collegiate student athletes with disabilities. ASAP proudly paves the way for those student athletes to increase participation and receive recognition for their extraordinary achievements.

"As a disabled person, you don't see a lot of yourself in the media," says Maria. "It's really hard to find your place in this world. So being able to give that community and that common experience to young disabled people is what I live for. I just hope to continue this for my entire life."

Improving the oral health and self-esteem of those in need

A healthy smile can mean a whole new beginning

"There is a profound need for oral health care in America," says Lynda Ricketson, CEO of Dental Lifeline Network.

Many adults can't afford good dental care; it's either too expensive, or they don't qualify for dental insurance.

Dental Lifeline Network is a national, nonprofit organization that collaborates care for people who are desperately in need of help with their oral health. Before receiving services from DLN, patients are often in physical pain and socially isolated. They don't smile often, have low-esteem, and grapple with increased anxiety.¹⁴

"After treatment," says Lynda, "they're able to actively pursue jobs, reconnect with family, and generally feel more confident reconnecting with life again."

We're passionate about well-being, and that translates to good oral care and healthy smiles — and the confidence that brings

As a major donor to DLN since 2018, Guardian helps to fund complimentary, comprehensive dental treatments for some of the most vulnerable populations. These treatments come from local dentists, including many in the Guardian network. Our long-standing philanthropic grant has given more than 45,000 patients another chance at good oral health.

"There are many people who need life-saving care such as dialysis, cancer treatments, or surgeries, and they can't get medical clearance because of cavities or gum disease, which are bacterial infections," says Lynda. "That needs to be restored or repaired in order to receive life-saving care."

We want these patients to feel like they're not alone. Dental Lifeline Network and Guardian have their backs.

Narrowing the wealth gap with The American College

We believe in the power of growing your own wealth in order to boldly pursue your dreams and confidently protect your families. But how do we reach those who aren't Guardian customers, those who typically don't fit the profile of a person who "amasses wealth?" Closing the wealth gap is an important pursuit, one Guardian takes on hand-in-hand with The American College.

Guardian's sponsorship of The American College Center for Economic Empowerment and Equality® helps to further financial education for historically underserved groups. Our support contributed to over 150 education scholarships and helped to publish a 3,500-person study delving into Black women's perspectives on money and how the financial industry can truly connect with them. It also helped to form a financial education accreditation program.

It's inspiring to have a great sponsor like Guardian in our work to build programs that uplift underserved communities. Their commitment has enriched our collective efforts to expand economic opportunity and financial confidence for more Americans.

We're committed to responsibly managing sustainability and climate-related risks

We operate with an aim to conserve resources, reduce waste, and protect the environment at our facilities.¹⁵

Notable highlights:

- We continue to enhance how we track our Scope 1 and 2 greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions data.¹⁶
- In support of our climate risk efforts, we performed our annual sustainability assessments of select value chain suppliers.
- We continued recycling efforts at our offices, including programs for battery recycling and filtered water bottle stations to minimize plastic waste. Our programs resulted in recycling 44 tons of electronic waste. We donated 15.5 tons of office furniture and equipment to Texas-based nonprofits.
- Our Office Move & Decommissioning program diverted 273 tons and 99.2% of materials from landfills around the country in 2024.

Guardian's support has made a tangible difference in our operations, allowing us to better equip our staff and volunteers as we work toward our mission of providing care and resources to the chronic homeless community.

How we integrate sustainability into our investments

Our Investments team is committed to acknowledging and considering sustainability factors in our analysis of potential investments. We believe that these factors help identify companies that create and preserve long-term value and superior risk-adjusted returns. We define responsible investment as the integration of material sustainability factors into traditional investment processes which support our pursuit of optimal portfolios.

Adding a sustainability lens to risk and opportunity decisions by combining our detailed company knowledge with third-party data brings insight into the decision-making process.

- 15 Guardian currently has a real estate portfolio of 27 corporate locations. To align with our evolving Workplace Strategy and our desire to maintain a presence in key markets, Guardian is reducing its office count to approximately 16 locations. As part of the reduction process, Guardian has subleased all or part of nine locations. Guardian will continue to monitor and optimize its physical footprint and the use of resources within its office locations.
- 16 The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America divested the ReedGroup business in [December] 2022, which triggered a re-baselining of the GHG Inventory consistent with best practices contained within the Greenhouse Gas Protocol. The GHG emissions associated with ReedGroup were removed from the 2019 baseline and subsequent reporting years to reflect this change in Guardian's subsidiary businesses.
- 17 We continue to optimize our operations and minimize the use of resources to reduce our environmental impact. The calculation of Scope 1 and Scope 2 emissions was based on a combination of actual energy consumption data and estimations. In cases where direct consumption data was not available, estimates were made based on facility size (square footage) and the number of occupants. Emission factors applied in the calculations were specific to the location of the electricity grid, ensuring alignment with regional energy mix and carbon intensity.
- 18 Dividends are not guaranteed. They are declared annually by Guardian's Board of Directors. The total dividend calculation includes mortality experience and expense management as well as investment results.
