Thanks all,

Are we all happy if phone the journalist in briefing that the statement we originally gave him is still accurate:

During the course of the review, we utilised betting specialist expertise, a Forensic Financial accountant and specialist external QC to examine the business model, the finances of the company and the complex legal questions over the appropriate regulatory framework.

This is a tricky one. I wonder whether an off record phone call to the journo would allow us to confirm that we did use [REDACTED] forensic accountancy experience [REDACTED]

Yes [REDACTED] – will you be putting the additional line as below the line/background info only?

Best wishes

Hi all,

[REDACTED] has spotted this <https://twitter.com/FiGuide/status/1440798818560200710>

Hi [REDACTED],

We've had the below enquiry from [REDACTED] at [REDACTED]

He is drawing on an update to our website where we said:

Following concerns about the operator we began a formal Review into the licensee under section 116 of the Gambling Act on 20 May 2020. The focus of our review was to address issues in relation to the betting aspect of the product At that stage there were no grounds to suspend their operating license.

During the course of the review, we utilised betting specialist expertise, a Forensic Financial accountant and specialist external QC to examine the business model, the finances of the company and the complex legal questions over the appropriate regulatory framework.

We don't have a QA on this.

Are you happy if we simply reply with:

You'll have to approach the Inquiry to discuss what was included in the report and why.

As we informed you previously, we utilised betting specialist expertise, a Forensic Financial accountant and specialist external QC to examine the business model, the finances of the company and the complex legal questions over the appropriate regulatory framework.

Hi [REDACTED],

I'm writing about the review into Football Index published yesterday.

The report does not appear to mention the forensic accountants which the Gambling Commission said it had brought in last year to assess FI's operations.

Please can you confirm that the GC did bring in forensic accountants to look at FI, what date they were brought in and when they completed their work?

Kind regards,
