

OUR PROGRAMS

Nearly half of U.S. teens don't know that deadly fentanyl is being used to make fake prescription pills. As the leading fentanyl awareness and education nonprofit, Song for Charlie provides research-informed tools and resources to help families, communities and young people safely navigate today's evolving drug landscape.

Complete toolkit for educators featuring Real Talk About Fake Pills—our new 20-minute film for teens developed with medical professionals, educators and youth experts—plus discussion guides, lesson plans and classroom materials.

Student-led initiatives that build campus awareness through peer clubs, events, and campaigns. Includes mentorship, free materials and support to help young leaders protect their classmates.

Expert-developed tools and strategies to help parents and caregivers protect their teens through informed conversations about fentanyl, fake pills and healthier ways to manage stress and anxiety. Features our acclaimed film, interactive practice scenarios and family discussion guides.

Groundbreaking program created by and for the Latinx community, available in English and Spanish, that honors familismo while equipping families with culturally relevant resources to address the fentanyl crisis.
