OnDosis completes a private placement of SEK 92 million led by Aeternum Capital

OnDosis, a Swedish Life science company developing a new device technology platform, announced today that the Company has completed a pre-IPO private placement of SEK 92 million. Investors in the private placement include Aeternum Capital, DIG Investment and Albonja.

The private placement follows the successful expansion of the strategic collaboration between OnDosis and Tiefenbacher Group, which was announced on 25 May 2021. Proceeds from the share issue will fuel OnDosis growth agenda, focusing on finalising development of the ongoing drug-device development for treatment of ADHD, and initiating four new projects in the areas of rare disease and transplantation medicine. In addition, OnDosis will focus on establishing a digital platform and developing its digital capabilities, as well as scaling up supply chain ahead of FDA filing of the drug-device combination.

OnDosis develops a novel approach to the administration and delivery of pharmaceuticals through a handheld device that integrates medicine with intelligent dosing and digital capabilities. With its drug-device, OnDosis is uniquely positioned in the convergence of personalised medicine and digital therapeutics.

Martin Olovsson, CEO, OnDosis, comments: “We are delighted for Aeternum Capital and Albonja to join our growth journey. With their entry, and with the continued support from DIG Investments, we are now in a strong position to ramp up our capabilities and to deliver on the four new high potential drug-device combinations that we are developing together with Tiefenbacher. This private placement is also an important step towards a potential IPO of OnDosis in the coming years.”

Staffan Ternström, Chairman of the Board, OnDosis, says: “OnDosis has a bold ambition to make significant impact for patients across a broad range of disease areas through a new and proprietary technology which enables closed loop disease management. The support from Aeternum and DIG represents a key component and a great strategic fit in achieving this ambition. We are very excited to welcome them onboard. Through Albonja, I am pleased to take part in this financing round as well.”

“We are very proud to support OnDosis on the growth journey with our investment in the Company”, says Vegard Søråunet, Partner and Investment Director at Aeternum Management, which manages Aeternum Capital independently. “OnDosis is an excellent fit to our investment strategy of identifying companies in high-growth business verticals that have a significant potential to create value in their field – which is exactly what we see in OnDosis.” Further, Anders Tuv, Adviser to Aeternum Management and future Board member at OnDosis, comments: “We believe that OnDosis has an exciting journey ahead by truly revolutionising the way patients take their medicines. We look forward to working with OnDosis and contributing to a successful launch of the first product in the near future.”
