MacGuffin - a Jukebox for Literature

If your Reading Group is interested in short stories and poetry try MacGuffin.

Manchester-based independent publisher Comma Press have launched a free website and app for short stories and poetry. Everything on MacGuffin is in text and audio form, so you can read the text, stream the audio, or toggle between the formats.

Free to use, MacGuffin hosts sample stories and poetry from independent publishers and spoken-word nights (you'll find stuff on MacGuffin from Bloodaxe, Carcanet, Peepal Tree, Valley Press, Comma Press and more).

Anyone can publish their own short stories and poetry on MacGuffin too. You just need to upload an audio recording along with the text (it doesn't have to be professionally recorded - most people just do it on their phones). Copyright remains with the author, and you can unpublished at any time.

MacGuffin uses a tagging system to help you find what you're looking for: anyone can add tags to anyone else's work to describe the content, or create a playlist. This means you can search for stories and poems thematically (try searching the tags #poem and #snow for poems about snow). For a sample of the range of content on MacGuffin, search the playlist #stockport_libraries_reading_list
