You may be able to move the commuted value of your benefit to an RRSP. If you choose this option, please complete a form T2151 - Direct transfer of a single amount available on our website or from your financial institution.

COMMON-LAW SPOUSE

OMERS considers a common-law spouse to be a person who is living together with the member in a conjugal relationship:

- continuously, for a period of not less than three years; or
- in a relationship of some permanence if they are the natural or adoptive parents of a child, both as defined in the Family Law Act (Ontario).

ELIGIBLE DEPENDENT CHILD

OMERS considers an eligible child to be:

- a natural child;
- a legally adopted child; or
- a person whom you have demonstrated a settled intention to treat as a child of your family (except under an arrangement where the child is placed for valuable consideration in a foster home by a person having lawful custody).

At the time of your death, the eligible child must be dependent on you for support and also must be:

- 18 years or younger in the year of your death;
- under age 25 and a full-time student; or
- totally disabled.

ELIGIBLE SPOUSE

Post-retirement-date spouse

If you enter into a spousal relationship after retirement, and there is no person who qualifies as your retirement-date spouse, OMERS considers the surviving legal spouse or common-law spouse at the date of your death to be the eligible spouse for the purpose of spousal survivor benefits, provided you were not "living separate and apart" (see below) and he/she has not waived rights to survivor benefits.

Pre-retirement-date spouse

If you die before your pension start date, OMERS considers your pre-retirement spouse to be the eligible spouse for the purpose of spousal survivor benefits. Your pre-retirement spouse is your legal spouse or common-law spouse on the date of your death (before retirement) provided you were not "living separate and apart" (see below) on the date of your death and he or she has not waived rights to survivor benefits.

Retirement-date spouse

If you die after your pension has started, OMERS considers your retirement-date spouse to be the eligible spouse for the purpose of spousal survivor benefits. Your retirement-date spouse is your legal spouse or common-law spouse on the date your first pension payment is due provided you were not "living separate and apart" (see below) on that date and he/she has not waived rights to survivor benefits.

LEGAL SPOUSE

OMERS considers a legal spouse to be a person who is legally married to the member.

LIVING SEPARATE AND APART

Whether two persons are "living separate and apart" is often complicated to assess. It is a question of both fact and law and must be determined on a case-by-case basis. The determination may require the assistance of a lawyer.

In general, physical separation is usually, but not always, an indication that two persons are living separate and apart. However, physical separation is not always conclusive. There must also be a mutual or a unilateral intention for two persons to live separate and apart and end the marriage or common-law relationship. For example, a physical separation between two spouses caused by one of them living in a nursing home will not necessarily result in a determination that the spouses are living separate and apart, provided that both spouses intended the marriage or common-law relationship to continue despite the physical barrier.

TOTALLY DISABLED CHILD

OMERS considers a totally disabled child to be someone whose physical or mental disability:

- occurred before age 21 or occurred before age 25 while a full-time student; and
- whose condition prevents self-support, or doing any work for compensation or profit (except for an OMERS-approved rehabilitation or workshop program); and
- did not become disabled from a wilfully self-inflicted injury, committing (or attempting to commit) an offence under the Criminal Code, or working in an unlawful occupation.
