MY KOHLER STORY

I arrived as a young architect to Los Angeles in 1988 just two years out of architecture school and I was very blessed to work for a good but very small design firm in Los Angeles called ZIMMERMAN & partners. This was a small firm that did very high-end residential and commercial projects. As a young architect I could not have asked for anything better because it was hands-on experience learning the craft of design detailing and specifications. This firm introduced me to Kohler plumbing fixtures in 1988 and soon after that, I was very fortunate to start my own practice and continue to specify Kohler as the only bathroom fixture brand in my designs for plumbing.

JOE OSAE-ADDO CEO, Constructs R+D Chairman, Archiafrika Associate, Ghana Institute of Architects

As a solo practitioner, my first project was a house in the southern suburbs of Los Angeles for a very young surgeon who agreed to use Kohler throughout his 10,000 square feet house. Thirty vears later the Kohler fixtures are still working, and he couldn't be happier.

I used Kohler for both my high-end projects and small remodeling projects with much lower budgets because Kohler had the look and the integrity that suited clients of all income brackets. I am very proud of my introduction to Kohler in 1988 in Los Angeles. Even my own humble house in Accra Ghana built in 2003 used Kohler products which I brought from Los Angeles 20-odd years ago. So, my relationship with Kohler is a personal one.

It is not affected, it's not about anything other than meeting my personal taste and introducing my clients to a product of integrity and style. Of course, I have used other plumbing fixtures in the past, but Kohler is the one that stands out, ubiquitous, in all my projects. It is everywhere and I am a proud customer of Kohler. The type of work I have been doing over the last 40 years hasn't changed much; the constant is my exploration of materiality and space in the minimalist space.

My projects are never fussy I don't believe in fussiness. I believe in minimalist ideals as modernism and the need for complementary fixtures and furniture to make the architecture, thus, rekindling my relationship with Kohler in Accra Ghana to me, is a match made in heaven. I am pre-timed to establish a strong association with Kohler and introduce my many protegees to the product. I am so fond of Kohler that I still remember the specification numbers in that house in Parlos Verdes about 30 years ago. Kohler to me represents the refinement and rigor that architecture demands. Many years ago. I coined a word to describe the kind of architecture I wanted to do in Africa which is "inno-native" which is a combination of the western ideals and my personal use of elements and materials from our continent. Kohler is the "inno" part of that word innovative and stellar.
