[Trigger warning: discussions of anti-Black violence and police brutality]

To our UBC Community,

We acknowledge that our initial statement was a rushed effort, and we did not take the necessary time to think thoroughly about how we, as an undergraduate society, can work to dismantle white supremacy in our community, and for this, we sincerely apologize. Thus, we are expanding on our previous message to state that we stand in unwavering solidarity with the Black communities here at UBC, across Canada and the world.

We recognize the deep-seated anti-Black racism that exists in this country and its University campuses - to which UBC is no exception. We also recognize that the AUS itself is a privileged organization that has not historically fostered the most welcoming environment towards Black and Indigenous students. Although, in recent years, we have begun to incorporate more dialogue and initiative around equity, inclusion and intersectionality, we know this is not enough and we have a great amount of work to do. We also call upon the UBC Faculty of Arts (FoA) to make their own statement in support of Black students and the steps they might take to address systemic racism on these unceded lands. The AUS Executive looks forward to working with the FoA in placing anti-racist advocacy as a central goal for this year, starting with continuing our call for more diverse faculty.

The AUS would also like to recognize three, Black-run AMS Clubs that have done tremendous work to foster a safe community for Black students on campus. We express our desire to collaborate with and support these clubs in the near future, and strongly encourage all our students to educate themselves about the achievements made by these clubs through the links provided below.

The following brief descriptions are adapted from these organizations' respective websites.

Africa Awareness Initiative (AAI): Started in 2002, AAI is committed to improving discourse surrounding and including Africa at the University of British Columbia. They aim to produce outstanding academic forums to encourage critical discussions pertaining to the relevance of the African continent and its Diaspora. AAI has strived to work in partnership with and in support of UBC's African Studies Program (AFST). Their primary goals involve increasing AAI's involvement in and exposure to African Studies with the mission of expanding the Minor Program.

Africa Business Club (ABC): Founded in 2015, their mission is to promote the Africa business landscape by creating a platform that connects students, academics, and professionals in North America to the economic, political, and social opportunities in Africa. Each year, ABC holds the Africa Business Forum (ABF). The ABF congregates international business leaders, entrepreneurs, professionals and students for a day of focused discussion and relationship building.

Our First Steps to Fostering Anti-Racism Internally and Externally

In this letter, we outline 3 immediate steps the AUS will take to implement anti-racism internally, and across the Arts community in the hopes that we can lay the foundation for a more inclusive and advocacy-based undergraduate society. Note: These are only the first steps. We will be back to update you with more action and information very soon.

1. Immediate Donations

 Once support is obtained from our Council, we will make an immediate donation to two Black-run organizations that amplify Black voices and fight racial injustice in the United States and Canada. More information about the exact size of the donation and its recipients to be posted on June 6th.

2. Creation of a Philanthropy Grant

• We are currently in our budget-creation phase and working to form a monthly Philanthropy Grant for locally-based organizations working to seek justice for marginalized groups. Once we obtain the support of our council, we will be able to implement this grant and an accompanying process where Arts students can nominate eligible individuals/organizations. All details to be confirmed by the end of June.

3. Internal Equity and Inclusion Workshops

All members of the AUS will participate in a mandatory seminar - "Speak Up!
 Community Building with Respect" - offered by UBC's Equity & Inclusion Office during our two annual orientation events. This workshop aims to foster a supportive and inclusive work environment that simultaneously eliminates problematic practices.

Below, we are providing a list of mental health resources for students in distress, as well as calls to action for members of the community to join the AUS in support of Black Lives Matter. We have also included educational resources, donation portals and petitions in the hopes that it will help non-Black folks reflect upon how they can better equip themselves in their support of Black communities and individuals.

Thank you,

The Arts Undergraduate Society Executive Team
