BTC Left Behind In Risk Asset Rally

The strong jobless claims data and the subsequent market rally last night show that market is firmly in 'good news is good news' territory. The overnight price actions in the equity, bond, FX, and commodity markets mostly indicate that the fear of the Fed falling behind the curve with slow rate cuts is subsiding. An oddball in all this is BTC, which is -4%. The lack of leverage (see the low OI/MC ratio on page 4) suggests that the weakness is driven by spot market. This gives credence (but not proof) to the view that whale spot selling is the culprit, although whether they are DOJ or Gox creditors remains to be seen. Meanwhile, 2Q24 13F filings show that the number of institutions in BTC ETFs is up 30% qoq (shout out to @Matt_Hougan), suggesting institutional demand for BTC ETFs is intact.
