

The health sciences industry offers a wide variety of career choices for the next generation, not just becoming a doctor. From nurses and therapists to laboratory scientists, public health specialists, and medical assistants, health sciences relies on a wide network of skilled professionals who often work behind the scenes. Use this toolkit to continue making a lasting impact and give students the skills and confidence they need to be future ready.

Activate

Health sciences isn't just for doctors—it's a network of careers that support patient care, research, data, and community health. Have your students share how their AOHS made them future ready with the classroom activity below!
