Resident worker counts are notably high for an area of this size, with a significant historical growth rate. Over the past five years, there has been a remarkable 25%+ increase in the targeted labor force of approximately 25,000 workers, indicating a highly sustainable labor segment poised for future industry growth. A substantial percentage of workers are commuting away from the area for work, showing that existing resident workers still outnumber job openings. Leveraging this commuting pattern presents an opportunity by establishing job opportunities closer to their homes.
