- John Lilly (PA Convention, 1969) proposed floatation as a method to induce psi-conducive states of consciousness, yet it remains underexplored
- Floatation removes environmental input, leaving only the inner experience - the 'in-perience' (Lilly, 1977)
- Offers an alternative to the Ganzfeld method, consistent with Honorton's Noise Reduction Model

'It's dark, quiet. You can't orient yourself in space, can't tell where the body ends, and the fluid begins. Identity dissolves... A sea of no-Self'

"INSTANT MEDITATION"

(WITTMANN, 2018)

- Extended pilot telepathy work with a precognition design, enhanced methods, and a larger sample
- Participants reported spontaneous mentations and rated target video clips alongside decoys
- 100+ trials explored precognition, individual differences and phenomenology of consciousness
- Is floating the 'perfect solution' for psi exploration?
