radicals and toxins. Healthy livers are crucial in preventing diseases such as non-alcoholic fatty liver.

What are the natural ingredients in Reliver Pro that make it work?

Ever wondered why Reliver Pro is so effective? You're in for a treat because we are about to reveal the natural ingredients which make this weight loss and liver support powerhouse product so effective:

Vitamin C

A study by Yoon Hee Cho, and his colleagues published in 2003 in the Journal of Nutrition provides evidence of the positive effects of vitamin C for liver health and weight reduction. The study examined obese mice that were fed a high fat diet. Some groups of the mice received vitamin C supplements.

The mice that were supplemented with Vitamin C had lower levels of liver fat accumulation compared to those in the control group. The study also found that supplementing with vitamin C led to improved glucose tolerance and a decrease in weight gain.

These findings confirm that vitamin C is a powerful antioxidant and can promote weight loss. It's a great addition to Reliver Pro.

Turmeric Root

Turmeric root, a bright orange-yellow spice used commonly in Indian and Asian dishes.

A study on the effects curcumin has on liver detoxification and fat burning processes produced compelling results. Participants were split into two groups in a double-blind placebo-controlled randomized trial.

The placebo group was given a daily dose curcumin, while one group received the extract. The curcumin group had a significant reduction in weight, BMI, and waist circumference after 30 days compared to placebo group.

The curcumin group also showed improved liver function markers including decreased levels of liver enzymes as well as increased liver antioxidant capability.

The study reported that curcumin supplements resulted in a reduction of inflammatory markers such as C-reactive proteins (CRP) or interleukin-6s (IL-6s).

Beet Root

Beetroot, and the betalains that are part of it, play an important role in liver health. They repair damaged liver cells. Chronic liver diseases such as non-alcoholic fat liver disease (NAFLD) are characterized oxidative stress, inflammation and liver cell damage.

Beetroot is a powerful antioxidant that scavenges harmful free radicals, and reduces oxidative stress within the liver. They also inhibit various inflammatory pathways and prevent inflammation-induced damage to liver cells.

Beetroot has also been shown to increase the production of liver-protective enzymes such as glutathione and superoxide dismutase. These help in the regeneration and repair of liver cells.

Celery Seeds

Celery seeds, which are tiny seeds derived from Apium graveolens, have been used in traditional medicine since centuries for their many health benefits.

In a study, a group overweight individuals incorporated celery seed into their daily diet over a 12-week period. Participants showed significant weight loss and a reduction in body fat at the end of the 12-week study.

Celery seeds caused a 2% reduction in body fat and a 3 % decrease in weight.

Celery seeds also boost the liver's detoxification process. The liver is essential in maintaining health and filtering out toxins. Celery seeds are rich in compounds such as coumarins, apigenin and other substances that have been proven to improve liver function and detoxification.

Milk Thistle

Milk thistle helps liver detoxification. Milk thistle is a natural way to help the liver metabolize and eliminate toxins. One of the ways it does this is by increasing the production of a phase II liver detoxification enzyme called glutathione-S-transferase (GST).

GST is essential for the detoxification process of many substances including drugs, pollutants and carcinogens. Milk thistle increases GST activity and helps eliminate these harmful compounds. This reduces the burden placed on the liver.

Artichoke Leaves

The Mediterranean region is the main source of artichoke leaves. They are scientifically called Cynara Scolymus. Artichoke leaves are known for their ability to protect the liver and promote liver detoxification.

Artichoke leaves contain a compound called cynarin. It has been proven to possess hepatoprotective qualities. Cynarin is an antioxidant that protects liver cells against oxidative stress, and the damage caused by free radicals.

Artichoke leaves also promote liver cell regeneration, which ensures the optimal function of the organ. It is especially beneficial to those with liver disease or who have suffered from liver-related illness.
