Ashwagandha

Ashwagandha has been traditionally utilized in Ayurvedic Medicine because of its many health benefits. Ashwagandha is well-known for its antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties. These may help to maintain healthy gums, and reduce oral inflammation. When incorporated into an oral hygiene regimen, these properties may support overall dental care.

Vitamin-D2

Vitamin D2, or ergocalciferol as it is also called, can be derived by plants. It is necessary for healthy teeth and gums. It is essential for calcium absorption which is crucial to tooth mineralization. Adequate vitamin D2 levels can promote strong teeth, and overall dental health.

Carnauba Wax

Carnauba is a natural wax that comes from the leaves the Brazilian palm trees. Carnauba wax is used in oral care products to provide a barrier that protects the teeth. This can improve the effectiveness of tooth brushing, and may even help prevent dental plaque.

Zinc

Zinc is a mineral essential to many biological processes. This includes dental health. Clinical studies show that zinc helps reduce dental plaque formation, which is one of the major factors in tooth decay and gingivitis. Zinc also helps maintain healthy gums, and it supports the healing process of the mouth.

Citric Acid

Citric acid is found naturally in citrus fruits. Citric acid can be harmful to enamel at high concentrations. However, it's used in many oral care products. Citric acid can enhance the taste and freshness in oral care products, and make them more enjoyable to use .

Spinach Powder

Spinach powder, which is made of dried spinach leaves, is an ingredient that is rich in nutrients. Although there are limited clinical studies that focus on the benefits of spinach for dental health specifically, it is well-known for its high vitamin A and C content, which is essential for gum health. These vitamins help to maintain healthy gums, and they also support the healing process.

Pectin

Pectin, a type soluble fiber in fruits is found in their peels and pulp. Pectin is a soluble fiber that can be found in fruits, particularly the peels and pulp. Its primary function is to gel food products. However, it also has a positive impact on dental health. Pectin has shown potential benefits for improving oral hygiene and reducing dental plaque. Pectin can help to inhibit harmful bacteria and promote a healthy oral environment.
