What is SeaTox?

Supplements are available to help you improve your health. The same ingredients are used in many products. Unfortunately, adding more ingredients doesn't mean that they are the best. How many people take multivitamins to feel better only to discover that they are not worth taking?

SeaTox is not just another product with the same ingredients. It offers unique ingredients that are only available in SeaTox. This supplement can fill in nutritional gaps and be added to tea, coffee or oatmeal for a healthy start to the day.

Amber Matthias is a nutritional wellness specialist who created SeaTox to rid the body of toxins which accumulate over time. These toxins can cause havoc with our health. They can affect our daily lives in different ways, but they all disrupt digestion, trigger inflammation and cause stress hormones.

Amber created SeaTox to satisfy the needs of consumers who wished to have better health and a more positive outlook on life. SeaTox delivers exactly that kind of performance.

How Does SeaTox work?

Sea vegetables are the reason SeaTox works so well. Other supplements do not include them. The seven wild-harvested veggies have amazing health benefits, ranging from weight loss and blood pressure reduction to weight loss. All seven vegetables provide the vitamins and minerals that the body requires, but when combined with vegetables, these nutrients go beyond the basics. SeaTox contains a number of ingredients that are both nutritious and supportive.

Chondrus Crispus

Chondrus Crispus is also known as Irish Moss. It's a smaller form of red sea alga. Chondrus crispus is the only species of Chondrus that grows in the Atlantic Ocean. It has been traditionally used to boost immunity. It can also protect against salmonella. It is rich in electrolytes. It's also one of only a few sources of polyunsaturated fats that are not animal-based.

Ascophyllum Nodosum

Ascophyllum nodosum, another seaweed found only in cold water, is brown. It is therefore mainly found in the White Sea, and on the Faroe Islands. The brown color of this seaweed, which can reach up to two meters in length and has leathery fronds, is often accentuated by green or olive tones. Ascophyllum Nodosum offers dental support to both humans and animals. Ascophyllum Nodosum also helps to reduce weight gain. Studies on the effects of alginates in Ascophyllum show that they reduce energy needs, promote fullness and help with weight loss.

Laminaria

Laminaria, a type of seaweed, is used to treat high blood pressure and weight loss. Also used for treating radiation sickness and cancer prevention, it is a bulk laxative. It is also known as deep-sea knots. This seaweed can be found in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

It is a good source of potassium and iron. Researchers have found that it can help with constipation, weight loss and high blood pressure.

Porphyra

Porphyra, as a whole seaweed species, contains many micronutrients, carbohydrates, and proteins. It is one of the most common seaweeds, creating nori or gim.

Porphyra, with over 60 species, is a great source of vitamin B12. It is anti-cancer, anti-oxidative, and immunomodulatory. This is one of the most effective sources of vitamin A that does not come from animal products. Porphyra is an anti-inflammatory and antioxidant, according to studies.

Fucus Vesiculosus

Fucus vesiculosus, also known as bladderwrack, is a type of algae that's primarily found in the British Isles. This branched algae is a popular choice for scientists because of its anti-diabetic properties. has also been associated with the treatment of obesity, constipation, thyroid disorders and inflammation.

Ulva Lactuca

Ulva Lactuca, a species of green algae, is often called "sea salad" due to its physical similarity with the land vegetable by the same name. In its natural state it is edible, but not classified as lettuce. It can reach a length of up to 7.1 inch, and will attach itself to rocks or other algae.

Ulva Lactuca is beneficial for bacterial and fungal infection. It has been shown in studies that Ulva Lactuca is anti-inflammatory and can counter cancer-causing oxidative damage and inflammation.

Fucus Evanescens

Fucus Evanescens is rich in minerals and dietary fiber, and offers many health benefits. Fucus Evanescens is an antitumor, anticoagulant and antithrombin according to many studies. SeaTox may reduce HIV infection risk, but the potency is not high enough to achieve this benefit. Most consumers report antibacterial and anti-photoaging effects. This formula's natural compounds also reduce obesity risk, allowing users to maintain a healthy body weight faster.

SeaTox contains also Oregon Grape Roots, Burdock Roots, Yellow Dock Roots, Dandelion Roots, and Red Clover.

SeaTox

Each bottle of SeaTox has 60 servings. Use the dropper included to measure out two drops of liquid. This will be taken twice daily for results.

This formula is effective for most consumers. However, those who are on medication or have a special diet prescribed by their doctor may want to consult with them before beginning the regimen.
