

FLOCK PARTY AND SWAROVSKI OPTIK TO SHOWCASE 'JAY DAY' URBAN BALCONY GARDEN AT RHS CHELSEA FLOWER SHOW 2022

May 2022 - Bird-loving landscape designers Flock Party, with the support of leading optic specialists SWAROVSKI OPTIK, will showcase the JAY DAY urban balcony at the RHS Chelsea Flower Show 2022 this May. The garden has been designed as an experiment to move the focus of a balcony from a human-centred space to one more inclusive of urban wildlife, and to inspire visitors to implement elements of the JAY DAY in their own balcony space at home.

Balconies are a place where the interior and exterior environment merge, and every element of the design enhances the relationship between the two. From the shading structure providing much-needed shelter for the predator-weary Jay to the planting design offering year-round support for birds and insects, the garden design maximises the small footprint of a balcony via layering and provides a space for both wildlife and people to enjoy.

Su-Yeon (Angela) Choi and Alison Orellana Malouf, Co-Founders of Flock Party say, "JAY DAY is a garden born out of our shared interest in urban birds and how they live in the built environment. We are constantly trying to understand the needs of other species and also to design more inclusive spaces for us all. We are delighted to be a part of this prestigious flower show and to have partnered with the premier optical brand, SWAROVSKI OPTIK, who has truly been a trailblazer in providing instruments that help people discover and understand nature around us."

Peter Antoniou, Country Manager UK and Rep of Ireland for SWAROVSKI OPTIK says, "We're proud to support Flock Party's JAY DAY entry in the RHS Chelsea Flower Show this year. There are many opportunities to spot birds and wildlife around urban areas, and we felt the JAY DAY urban balcony garden is a fantastic example of how any space, small or large, can be utilised to welcome and encourage wildlife visits."

Dr Michelle Reeve, Garden Birdwatch Manager at British Trust for Ornithology (BTO) says, "We are thrilled to be working with Flock Party on their JAY DAY balcony garden entry to the RHS Chelsea Flower Show. Flock Party are conscientious landscape designers and have created a garden not only to attract Jays, but also to encourage other vital garden wildlife to thrive in a space that people would be able to use and enjoy."

ABOUT FLOCK PARTY

We are a duo of bird-loving landscape designers, envisioning spaces that we can all flock to and party in. As designers of environments, we aim to cater to non-human agents of a site, to create new relationships and interactions amongst species, and to search for new ways to build and to live in this era of environmental crises. The duo behind the party, Alison Orellana Malouf and Su-Yeon (Angela) Choi, first met in their Masters studies together and are now both practicing landscape designers in the Netherlands and in Switzerland. JAY DAY balcony garden at the RHS Chelsea Flower Show is the collective's debut project and we look forward to many more exciting bird-brained designs together.
