

The EXECUTIVE BRANCH

leads the executive branch of U.S. Government. This person is the highest ranking government official in the United States. He is considered the leader of the country and, oftentimes, "the most powerful man in the world."

The executive branch is responsible for enforcing laws, appointing Supreme Court justices and ambassadors, and .

Once the president receives a bill from Congress, he can sign it into law, or he can it, which means to reject it.

The executive branch also includes the vice president as well as the president's , which is a group of trusted senior advisors who oversee different government departments.

Because the president "shall be Commander in Chief," he is in charge of the and overall defense strategy.

In order to serve as president, a person must have been a U.S. citizen since birth, have lived in the United States for at least 14 years, and be at least years old.

The Constitution gives the the responsibility of electing the president.

Ever since the 22nd Amendment was ratified in 1951, a president can serve a maximum of 4-year terms.

is the only president to have served more than two terms, which he did before the 22nd Amendment was ratified in 1951.

The EXECUTIVE BRANCH

THE PRESIDENT leads the executive branch of U.S. Government. This person is the highest ranking government official in the United States. He is considered the leader of the country and, oftentimes, "the most powerful man in the world."

The executive branch is responsible for enforcing laws, appointing Supreme Court justices and ambassadors, and MAKING TREATIES.

Once the president receives a bill from Congress, he can sign it into law, or he can VETO it, which means to reject it.

The executive branch also includes the vice president as well as the president's CABINET, which is a group of trusted senior advisors who oversee different government departments.

Because the president "shall be Commander in Chief," he is in charge of the MILITARY and overall defense strategy.

The Constitution gives the ELECTORAL COLLEGE the responsibility of electing the president.

In order to serve as president, a person must have been a U.S. citizen since birth, have lived in the United States for at least 14 years, and be at least 35 years old.

Ever since the 22nd Amendment was ratified in 1951, a president can serve a maximum of TWO 4-year terms.

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT is the only president to have served more than two terms, which he did before the 22nd Amendment was ratified in 1951.

