

ELECTIONS IN THE U.S.

Early in American history, many states required a person to be of a certain age and to own _____ so that the people voting on policies, such as taxes, would be affected by the policies they were making.

_____ give citizens a process to choose who will lead and represent them in government.

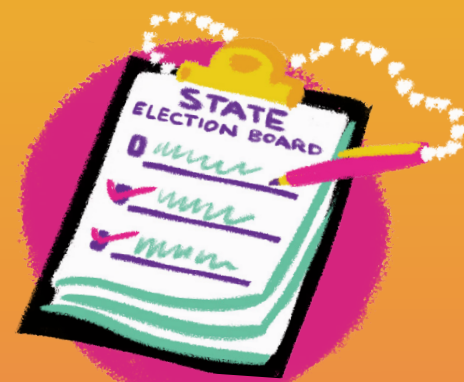

The Constitution requires that elections take place frequently and regularly so that the government would be responsive to the people. The _____ is the most responsive body because its elections are held every 2 years.

During _____ elections, the people help choose their political party's candidates. Then, in the general election, the people choose the winner among those candidates.

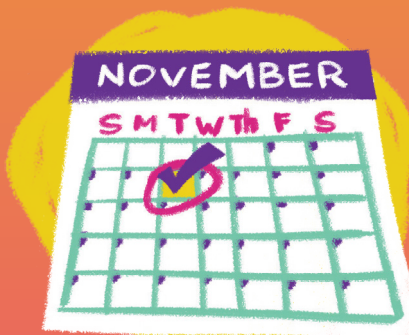

Elections ensure that political power ultimately belongs to the _____ and not the politicians.

_____ and _____ are primarily responsible for organizing elections.

Federal elections held almost halfway through a President's four-year term are called _____ elections and mainly involve electing members of the U.S. Congress.

The general election at the federal level is held the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Before the 26th Amendment lowered the voting age to 18, the minimum age that citizens were generally allowed to vote was _____.

ELECTIONS IN THE U.S.

Early in American history, many states required a person to be of a certain age and to own PROPERTY so that the people voting on policies, such as taxes, would be affected by the policies they were making.

ELECTIONS give citizens a process to choose who will lead and represent them in government.

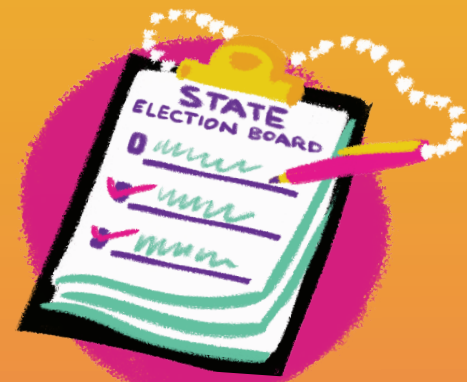

The Constitution requires that elections take place frequently and regularly so that the government would be responsive to the people. The HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES is the most responsive body because its elections are held every 2 years.

During PRIMARY elections, the people help choose their political party's candidates. Then, in the general election, the people choose the winner among those candidates.

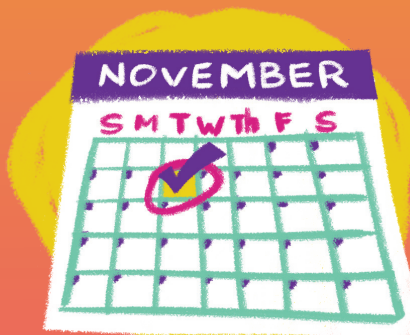

Elections ensure that political power ultimately belongs to the PEOPLE and not the politicians.

STATE and LOCAL GOVERNMENTS are primarily responsible for organizing elections.

Federal elections held almost halfway through a President's four-year term are called MIDTERM elections and mainly involve electing members of the U.S. Congress.

The general election at the federal level is held the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Before the 26th Amendment lowered the voting age to 18, the minimum age that citizens were generally allowed to vote was 21.