

DENTAL PROCEDURE AND ANESTHESIA AUTHORIZATION

Owner:

Pet's Name:

Date:

Your pet is being admitted for a dental prophylaxis. Please be assured that the veterinarians and staff of Eagle Animal Clinic will use the safest anesthetics available and that your pet will be constantly monitored throughout the procedure. Regardless of an animal's age or apparent health status, understand that all anesthetic procedures have an element of risk including, but not limited to stroke or death. Eagle Animal Clinic will be performing a pre-anesthetic blood test prior to the dental procedure to minimize the anesthetic risk for your pet. We will also be placing a catheter in your pet's leg to administer intravenous fluids during his or her anesthetic procedure and recovery. These tests and procedures are in place to enable us to take the appropriate steps to reduce the risks from otherwise undetected problems.

Option to perform a more comprehensive blood panel...

A complete blood panel is more comprehensive and ideal for older pets and/or those with pre-existing medical conditions. This panel provides additional blood chemistries that aid in the early detection and/or monitoring of several diseases. There is an additional fee of $48.00 to run the in depth blood chemistry panel.

Please INITIAL only ONE of the following: Accept () Decline () Blood Work Previously Completed ()

You have been provided with one or more treatment plans for your pet that details what will be included in today's dental procedure and the cost of those services. However, because it is impossible to completely assess an animal's oral health prior to obtaining oral x-rays, it can be difficult to provide you with an exact estimate of charges. Once your pet is anesthetized, we have obtained full mouth oral radiographs, and the plaque and tartar has been removed, the doctors can then accurately assess and measure his or her oral health and dental disease. Some pets will only need routine scaling of plaque and tartar, followed by polishing and fluoride treatment, while others will require additional procedures such as oral surgery and surgical tooth extraction. When a previously unknown abnormality with the teeth is found, such as a tooth fracture, abscessed root, or gingival pocket, the procedure may become more involved than initially anticipated. Due to this, the treatment plan provided for a routine dental procedure may no longer be accurate.

Also, for your pet's safety, one of our goals is to limit the amount of time your pet is maintained under general anesthetic. Because of this, we would like to know how you would like us to proceed if the doctor does indeed diagnose a previously unknown abnormality.
